Introduction

This book was first published in 2008. It was based on research I had conducted as well as my travels throughout planet Earth. This new version has a new cover and introduction only.

The political landscape of planet Earth has changed because of this book. The US is now talking to India, Iran and Cuba from a cooperative perspective. We have become India's largest defense supplier. We are changing the dialogue with former enemies in Iran and Cuba.

The vast caste system set up throughout South America will soon end. A new era is opening where human development will finally occur. Massive social change, driven by liberation theology, will occur.

The Paradox of Shem

My parents came to the United States in the 1970's. During that time, one of the key changes that had taken effect in our economy was the need for a college education to obtain access into professional occupations. My parents were unable to go to college when they were younger. My mother instilled in me the need to attend university as so many employers refused to hire my father because he did not go to college. The value of a college education was instilled in me through all aspects of my primary and high school education. I was told by so many older Americans the need to attend college and that I should borrow the money even if I could not afford it.

So it came as a shock to me when I was packing some things away in a storage facility that someone left their framed college diploma near the garbage bins. I gawked at it. Why would someone get rid of something of value? Especially something that probably cost them thousands of dollars. So why would they just throw it away? Was the value of a college education disappearing? I picked up the degree and looked at it. At first, due to my own upbringing, I thought the framed diploma fell off someone's cart. Looking around, I realized quickly that whoever used to possess it placed little value in it any more.

Over the last ten years, I have traveled extensively throughout the eastern United States. I usually wear a topcoat, a suit and a fedora when I travel. Absolutely. I actually look like the banker I was trained to be. My language reflects the élan of decades of communicating with America's gentry. Much to my chagrin, people always confuse me for an aristocratic stooge when I take mass transit.

An interesting thing happened to me while I was traveling to Jericho, New York in 2004 to the house of Steven Fine, a Long Island landlord. Riding the Long Island Railroad that day I was suddenly approached by a man carrying a huge olive green backpack (it looked like military grade canvas). It was designed to look like it was heavy and it resonated with metal clangs. He advised me that he just flew in from Pakistan by way of Heathrow and that he needed help finding a "very large train station". So he put his backpack down, making sure to make a large thud on the steel floor of the train, and asked me with such elegant precision if he was going in the right direction. I asked him where his ultimate destination was. He exclaimed loudly, an unlikely tone for a travel weary stranger lost in a strange land, so that all of the passengers on the train could hear that he wanted to go to Boston.

I kept talking to the man as I found the conversation utterly amusing. It is rare to find an agent of Pakistan's ISI so literally following a psychological operations script designed to spread fear of terror. He took my mannerisms incorrectly. He assumed by my vestments and attitude that I was a man of property and walked around with the delusions and paranoia garnered by years of reviewing stock market manipulations. He had no idea he was talking to a foreign policy expert. How could he possibly know? His mannerisms were clearly that of a newly minted intelligence agent.

How did I know he was a spy? He was trying so hard to act like the frenzied foreigner and sticking to his psychological operations script that he had no idea that he was speaking to a master of idiomatic English. A paranoid man of wealth cannot understand that people who are lost and going in the wrong direction show panic, and readily show fear. I noticed that the man was clean-shaven and well groomed. Very difficult, I thought to myself, considering he just "flew in" from London. Also in Penglish, the British English-Urdu slang of Pakistan's upper middle class, no one ever looks for a "very large train station". More importantly, if he just got off a jet, from a regional British English perspective, he should have asked for the "junction" or the "station". But what was even more ridiculous was his asking me how he could get to Boston as we were clearly heading into the Northeastern part of Long Island.

Travel mistakes like that just do not happen<sup>1</sup>. Someone does not get off a plane at JFK and wind up on a train to Jericho by accident. Moreover, he did not get on the train at Penn Station. This Pakistani ISI agent was riding the rails looking for paranoid Americans to relate his tail too. His mistaken assumption was that I did not know the role of Pakistan's ISI to our national security apparatus<sup>2</sup>.

I suspect from the rampant "terrorist chatter" and "orange alerts" that occurred during the subsequent weeks proved his eternal vigilance in obtaining directions from paranoid citizens to "a very large train station" with "lots of people". I am sure his whole stint on the rails probably earned him a promotion.

Why didn't I go to the authorities? Because unlike my fellow passengers, as a foreign policy expert, I knew that Pakistan's ISI and our NSA, CIA, and FBI are wedded at the hip. Few of us are aware that over the last six years, the CIA and the Department of Homeland Security have been legally torturing American citizens who say anything against the psychological operations that have been carried out on American soil. Many of us have joined the "disappeared"<sup>3</sup>.

Only the ultra-rich are immune to the reach of our national security apparatus, as CIA agents take an oath to protect our aristocracy. Being poor, I was afraid that I would not see my wife again. After all, our press, owned by the vassals of the petrochemical estate, has fully supported the suspension of habeas corpus and has actively stopped reporting the news. Few Americans understand that the Senate and the House of Representatives have fully given the President of the United States dictatorial powers due to September 11, 2001.

<sup>2</sup> Of course, those of you who have read The Rise of Hindu Supremacy are already aware that Pakistan's ISI played a critical role in the execution of the murderous acts on American soil on September 11th, 2001.

<sup>3</sup> After all, our CIA, the puppet master behind scores of murders in South America, has a lengthy and steeped background in kidnapping and murdering civilians.

Why all of these actions? Well, we have to hide the fact that so many Americans are in prison. We also have to hide the fact that so many families are broken. Our national security apparatus must prevent socialism from spreading, as that would reduce the wealth of their masters, our aristocracy. By creating the Muslim boogeyman, just like we created the Nazi devil in the 1930's, we can prevent Americans from realizing that massive currency deflation is going on and that we are slowly entering a massive economic depression, again<sup>4</sup>.

The United States is now officially a totalitarian nation as defined by Hannah Arendt. Over the next two decades, 80 million people will die in the United States due to old age. These frail individuals are easy to manipulate. The Baby Boomers are bona fide supporters of this war. So are millions of "liberals". Moreover, it is easy to incite fear in a population whose wealth is stored in digital accounts. This wealth can easily be manipulated via program trading by the open market operations of foreign central banks. Few of us can comprehend that our sworn enemies are financing many trading houses. Americans today own residual rights and fewer and fewer own cash and precious metals. Since fewer and fewer Americans have cash savings, more and more are subject to the whims of what the government labels as wealth.

On my way to the train in March of 2007, I watched as Sheik Alwaleed bin Tawal was walking clandestinely on Manhattan's 86th Street. He was wearing a tan jacket, tan pants and brown shoes. His hair was died slightly reddish. I had just made a quick trip to the bank and was walking back to the train. He had on expensive sunglasses that you could only find in Europe. Probably the only American who would wear such frames would have been the late Al Davis. Conservative but stylish. He would routinely scan over his shoulder.

I watched him as he walked down Second Avenue toward another one of his myriad apartment buildings. For the unenlightened reader, Sheik Tawal is worth well over $100 billion dollars. He is richer than Bill Gates, Warren Buffett and Larry Ellison combined. In the safest metropolis in the world, he walked always looking over his left shoulder. And why wouldn't he? His nation's aristocracy funded, aided and supported the murder of thousands at Ground Zero. His empire is crumbling. He knows that and so do his relatives. He has so much invested in the United States and it will all disappear in a fortnight when our currency collapses.

I wanted to run over to him and tell him about my previous book, The Rise of Hindu Supremacy, but I thought twice as a man of that wealth has a circle of veiled security. I surmised that at least four intelligence agencies (including our own FBI) would likely be following him<sup>5</sup>. I quickly decided that it was not worth it. I had no desire to be redacted to Syria and to be tortured by my own government. The games that the Sheik and our intelligence agencies play are limitless in their cruelty to the poor, and unlimited in their rewards to the global aristocracy.

This book is number two of the series, The Collapse of The United States. It reveals that we as a nation are losing our allies. More importantly, the linchpin for our economic success during the 20th century, Saudi Arabia, is currently fighting for its survival. As I stated clearly in Book I of this series, Saudi Arabia will not survive this decade. Thus, our existing security structure (see below) will unravel.

Current American Security Structure

Latin America is rapidly seeing Brazil and Venezuela rise as raw material exports finance a complete restructuring of these developing economies. Chinese and Indian demand for commodities is also causing a wholesale expansion of education, universities and health care in South America. The critical question many totalitarian aristocracies face in Latin America is whether they can continue to thrive under the aegis of the US nuclear umbrella. How will these states, havens for narcotraffickers and CIA-supported right wing juntas for decades, be able to survive when other countries are willing to pay more than we are for their produce, narcotics and hydrocarbons? More importantly, how will we be able to keep them in our fold as trade between themselves, China and India eclipses the trade they have with us?

Decades of our financing one dictator after another have weighed down Latin America with broad poverty. Unable to export agricultural goods to the United States at market prices due to GATT quotas, many are now exporting to Asia. Chinese influence will easily increase in the Western Hemisphere as we have long abrogated the task of caretaker and we have willingly accepted the role of oppressor. Therefore, the rise of the East will also cause many in Latin America to start looking away from affirmative incarceration and looking toward social development. This will also lead many multinational corporations in the region to question the value of the Monroe Doctrine as a policy mantle for the United States. The Japanese already look to South Americans for food stocks and the Russian FSB will again penetrate the region to protect their national interest. But this time the FSB will accomplish it, like our CIA and NSA, under the subterfuge of capitalism.

The Chinese and Indian models are also viable for many mixed race Spanish nations as these Latin civilizations are also looking to shed affirmative incarceration and openly end their caste-based aristocracies. Moreover, our nemesis Cuba will rise as India and China both have long standing relationships with the only Communist nation in the region dating back decades. The next decade will see Cuba reemerging as the fulcrum of significant trade between Asia and Latin America. Cuba can argue that it does not harbor CIA operatives to many Asian multinationals. This selling point will be easily accepted.

While those who support our existing intelligence regime keep talking about a grand chessboard, the reality is that geopolitics is not a two dimensional game. Unbeknownst to our current generation of policy wonks, no nation is willing to play the game under the old rules, except us. By not repealing the social planning missteps we made during the Viet Nam War Era (affirmative incarceration, denigging, and feminization), we face the social reality (similar to Israel, England, Japan and Germany in the 21st century) that there is a growing section of our population, our aristocracy, who will never serve in our military.

This diagram prognosticates a future erosion of the Monroe Doctrine.

History has shown that when apartheid democracies transform into apartheid theocracies, a phalanx of social troubles will arise. By preventing the rich from being drafted, our nation faces rampant homosexuality, an escalating decline in family formation, and an increase in the manufacture of just in time polyester females (males who have been castrated and medically induced and surgically camouflaged to wear female costumes). You would think that this would call into question the relevance of the vast concentration camps set up to eliminate the urban poor within our borders. But Emperor Augustus's relatives do not hear the cries of the poor. Clearly, state sponsored murder within the United States will have to be reduced as more and more recruits will be necessary for our future war with Iran.

More importantly, men who would normally have served in our military are now serving in the various paramilitary services whose primary mission is to harass the poor daily. Unable to dismantle the fascist infrastructure of affirmative incarceration, our nation will soon face the same economic irrelevance that Great Britain and France faced in the twentieth century. As the optical internet spreads all over the planet, the list of allies who have financed our massive gulag and concentration camp apparatus for three decades will grow thin. Many of the apartheid theocracies that we have sponsored have their own internal demographic problems to deal with.

Consequently, the civilized world is realigning and shifting toward the East. As global GDP shifts from the West, critical legs of our global security network, Taiwan and Japan, face imminent threats. A rising China will need liquid credit markets and client states. Thus, it is in the best interests of Taiwan and Japan to appease their former oppressor and look for avenues toward reconciliation. Clearly, their future energy and security needs will depend on it.

The destabilization of Saudi Arabia is now in its second decade. What was once classified for the television viewer as terrorism should now be stated for what it always has been classified in foreign policy circles, a full-scale revolution. This Islamic revolution will also end and leave a bitter taste in our mouths. Many nations are now clamoring to stay in favor with the Al Sauds while at the same time currying favor with their future conquerors, Russia's FSB.

Saudi Arabia's eventual collapse and the resulting coup d'état that will occur this decade is not a clear threat to Japan or Taiwan, but it is a clear threat to Israel. Israel, a country that has never been able to capitalize on its Ashkenazi position in a Sephardic part of the Islamic world will face many daunting tasks as it seeks to compete on the world stage with India and China, two behemoths that will generate nearly 90% of all college graduates in twenty years. Our nation needs to be concerned that the sucking sound she hears from China will also echo in her ears like a Bollywood dance routine's chimes.

India will easily become a dominant manufacturing power. Once it creates a tax code that facilitates accelerated depreciation for large property and plant, it will generate the excess savings that facilitates human development. It already has the human resources that will enable it to create a liquid credit market. India's rise in lower scale manufacturing has already brought on vast depression in the Gaza Strip. While Israel has not signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, it remains open to question how long Israel, due to its limited geography, can hide the effects of gamma radiation on its Arab population.

Cancer knows no religion. Its sole purpose is to annihilate human flesh. Slowly but surely Israel will look beyond the propaganda of WMD and peer into a future that is increasingly not economically favorable. As India rapidly industrializes, the key issue is what will remain of Israel's economy that will be global scale. What are Israel's strengths? How will its enemies exploit its weaknesses? Clearly, its strategic relevance to the United States will be questioned when the House of al Saud falls this decade.

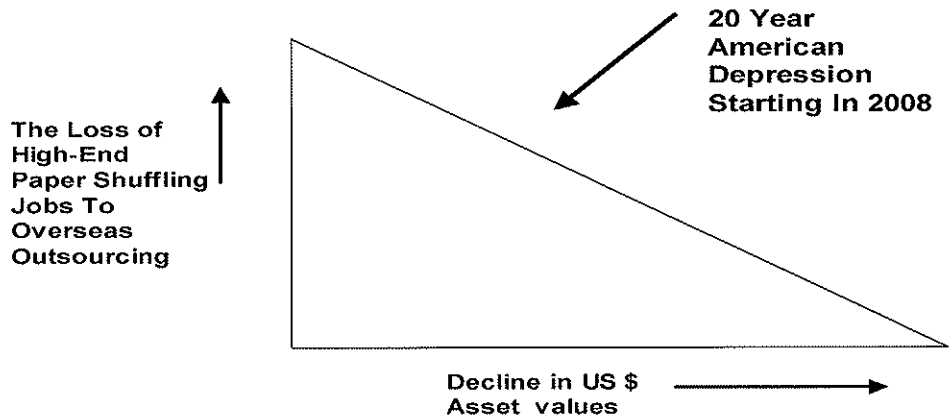

Will Israel be able to maintain its social inequities as the optical internet rolls out to the Arab world? Has Israel fathomed the internal consequences of the end of apartheid theocracies in the United States, Great Britain, Spain, France and Germany? Will China and India assist it against the Arab world as the sun is rising on the Iranians? Recall that China and India have significant Muslim populations. What are the small country's options?

The answers to many of these questions are classified and beyond the scope of this book. This book will further expand on my view that India is now the number one enemy of the United States. With the rampant growth of its heterosexual population, and its consequent need for fuel, food, and basic materials to feed its non-homosexual children, India remains a clear and present danger to the national security of the United States. As I stated in The Rise of Hindu Supremacy, the orderly tax-free transfer of wealth from nearly 80 million WASPs to their progeny can only be guaranteed if India is destroyed.

If India is not destroyed, then we as a nation will have to unravel the social policies that have enabled the WASP majority to maintain control of the national security apparatus. Clearly, affirmative incarceration, feminization, denigging, financilization and mandarinization over the last thirty years have led to the creation of a caste system in the United States. Few of us who have supported the creation of a caste system, ever realized that such an economic system has no university system, no medical system and limited economic opportunity. In a caste system there is no middle class, only rich and poor.

The Integration Of China And India Into The Global Economy Will Lead To The End of WASP Supremacy

Like the English, the Spanish, the Portuguese, the Mayans, the Aztecs, the Romans, the Greeks, the Egyptians, and the Babylonians those in power will avoid the restructuring of society, and will never cede power. Just ask Saddam Hussein!

Is our democracy in mortal danger? What does a wealthy Arab Sheik have to do with The Rise of The Fourth Reich? Why would an agent of Pakistan's ISI be riding the Long Island Rail Road prior to the Democratic Convention in 2004? What does a framed college diploma lying near the rubbish bin have to do with The Collapse Of The United States? Read on.

The End of Time

Time is a psychological concept. Its physical aspect (its so called scientific measure) cannot change. Therefore, physical time is based on our perception of the solar year and the speed our planets rotate around the sun. Time affects different creatures at different rates. For example, the fruitfly has a limited lifespan that lasts several days. It would have a different perception of time than a hippopotamus that lives for decades. Similarly time affects humans differently. Depending on one's place in our country's caste system and the level of urbanization one actually encounters, time's effect from one person to another in our society will vary.

The effect of time on emotions can only be seen in societies where the concept of rent manifests. Where rent manifests, the notion of status is created to mimic and replace aboriginal norms of hereditary birthrights. This notion of status is largely based on where one lives. For example, many African Americans significantly earn more in New York City than in other parts of the United States. But because they live in the "poor" parts of New York City, other African Americans from poorer parts of the country do not accord them the status that they rightfully deserve based on income and overt aptitude.

Americans are more drastically affected by time because they have structured their entire world around status, a concept based on the polyester psychological delusion that a human being can control time. I say perception because one of the great fallacies in our nation is that we do not have enough time. We are psychologically convinced by television, movies and also advertising within various media that the rich have more time than the poor. This is not true at all. Each of us has a lot more time than we think we have. In fact life spans, even in malaria stricken India, have expanded significantly with the development of antibiotics. Consequently, many of us will live nearly twice as long as those who were born in the first half of the nineteenth century.

Most Americans before the advent of electricity ate earlier and slept earlier. Many societies have gotten rid of the concepts of sharecropping as the paradigm resulted in many landlords having excessive power<sup>6</sup>. Landlords typically come to power in any society that starts looking at time as a way to control people<sup>7</sup>. Marxists often look at capital as the source of society's ills. They are wrong.

Those who can control time always define society's ills. These individuals garner power by collecting excessive rent from income. These individuals have a vested interest in increasing their income. Excessive rent can be defined as interest, taxes, and leasehold payments. They can only collect excessive rent if they can convince people that there is a status aspect to living at a particular location<sup>8</sup>.

Overwhelmingly the power structure of all religions, not the head of a religion per se, but those who manage and run the day-to-day affairs of a faith, are the progeny of landlords. Few religions pay the priests more than a subsistence living. Thus, religions the world over are controlled and manipulated by landlords<sup>9</sup>. Every newspaper in America criticizes China's desire to pick bishops and prelates within its borders to obfuscate the role of the state in Western religions. But few journalists elucidate that the Chinese are only implementing what every established religion in our nation already does i.e., making sure new clerics do not offend the existing power structure.

<sup>6</sup> This is why feudalism lasted for centuries in Europe. There was no production alternative to generate income from fallow land except the agrarian landlord-tenant relationship.

<sup>7</sup> All human societies use time ultimately to control its people. The psychological prison of time compression is the last vestige of power in modern civilization.

<sup>8</sup> This is the process for wealth formation even prior to the ancient ruins under the Sea of Japan.

Not a single priest has stood up to a landlord in New York City. Not a single landlord has ever been excommunicated from the Catholic Church. The progeny of the Bin Laden family, one of the largest landlords on the planet, were legally removed by the FBI from the United States to prevent them from being prosecuted for the 9/11 massacres.

When a society becomes economically stable, landlords create the illusion of love to socialize women, as no religion has ever been capable of socializing men. Women through endless media placement become convinced that marriage is burdensome and should be delayed. The government enables women to enter the workforce by removing men through incarceration from the workforce<sup>10</sup>. As can be seen from my last book, The Rise of Hindu Supremacy, women then become convinced from media placement that they deserve jobs and have earned their positions. Thus, women become empowered and quickly become convinced by endless magazine articles that the role of a father is strictly a financial role.

By convincing women that they can have careers, landlords have effectively delayed child bearing for women. Retailers owned by the landlord work with religions to encourage the display of luxury goods in religious settings. Religions the world over tolerate women coming into their houses of worship wearing expensive handbags, jewelry, exotic silks, furs and plush woolen clothing. Envy ensues and women go home yearning for shiny amulets and opulent fabrics.

Subsequently, girls who do not have these fancy clothes become convinced that their fathers are inadequate. Gullible precocious females are easily influenced by media placement that a good man will provide her luxuries if he wishes to marry her. A good man is not a moral man but one who can shower her with expensive gifts. Her peers, according to editorials published in popular magazines, tell her that young women who engage in promiscuity get lavish presents from their men. Consequently, the society has to build orphanages and private schools for all the children produced by all these men. Finally, they develop procedures to terminate pregnancies, as there is a need for more love, but not the ultimate consequence of love, children. This is why the Old Testament and even the Upanishads never criticize landlords. Not a single historian will point out the inconsistencies in the Old Testament with respect to landlords because they are fully aware that God wrote the Bible<sup>11</sup>. Even in Meiji Japan, Emperor Hirohito, the largest landlord in Japan, was deified and worshipped as a god<sup>12</sup>. In Japan, the geisha is a single woman who has not married and has no children.<sup>13</sup>

<sup>10</sup> This process was enacted in England and France prior to their economic collapse as well.

Landlords cannot control a society unless they can manipulate the emotions of people. Rent and access to schooling are two ways that the emotions of people can easily be manipulated in any society. Status is determined by the excessive rent paid and overall schooling a person has. Few parents understand that the entire process is manufactured<sup>14</sup>.

By creating and manufacturing endless credentials, societies prolong the time it takes for an individual to compete in the marketplace for labor. Thus, those who are established can greatly increase their incomes. The only way the newly minted can increase their incomes is by putting off marriage and children. This enables the aristocracy to garner greater influence, as their children will outnumber the children of the poor. Wealthy societies also create entertainments that look

<sup>11</sup> Why would God protect landlords? Jesus Christ's father and mother were relatives of the two largest landlords in Jerusalem. This is why Caesar had to make him divine. Otherwise he would be viewed as a pagan Roman deity.

<sup>12</sup> The Pharaohs of Egypt, as well as the Maharajahs of India, were the largest landlords in history and were also revered as God.

<sup>13</sup> We are told overwhelmingly that geishas are not prostitutes. So what are they? How can they afford such nice kimonos?

<sup>14</sup> I never forget the horrible dinner I had with three Harvard graduates who insisted that everything I said was specious. I finally inquired if it was specious because I did not go to Harvard.

down on people with too many children. Ultimately, a vicious cycle of depression is created.

By avoiding taxes on rent, tax-exempt landlords can easily manipulate law enforcement and ultimately government itself due to their excessive contributions to political campaigns. These same "charities" give subsidized apartments to those they feel are supportive of their control of the economy. Many universities in America provide college acceptances to the children of politicians, newspaper reporters, and aristocrats that enable them to keep their tax-exempt status. These institutions then legitimate racist and sexist treatises that promote homosexuality, lesbianism and blatant promiscuity<sup>15</sup>. That is why politicians often say their hands are tied. So many of them, regardless of party, are beholden to the munificence of their landlord benefactors.

In New York City, the three biggest landlords pay no property taxes and yet are the strongest stalwarts for WASP supremacy. All three landlords are WASP controlled entities. By operating as tax-free corporations, they are able to operate above the aegis of accounting rules. Thus, since they pay no income taxes, they operate in an arena that is not permeable by time.

Human beings view time from a physical and psychological perspective. The physical time it takes to grow up cannot be changed. But the distress of growing up is easily manufactured. Much of that stress comes from physical distance.

For example, landlords in New York City control the emotions of people by making it very difficult to go to school at an early age.

Largest Landlords in America

Landlord	Wealth Under Their Influence
Trinity Church	Over $2 trillion
Catholic Church	Over $1 trillion
Rockefeller Family Trusts	Over $10 trillion
New York University	Over $1 billion
Columbia University	Over $2 billion

Balance sheets contain historical costs. Many of the entities have land costs which are less than $100,000 an acre in modern cities. Political donations can be made in cash, payment in kind, and services (supernumerary jobs, access to private schools, academic awards, housing, degrees, adoptions, divorce, and annulments) to facilitate totalitarian government. These are conservative estimates.

Since many of them do not pay income or property taxes, they can use the excess profits of their enterprises to manipulate political processes. One process that they absolutely will not let go of is their control of television programming and the allocation of property taxes via municipal governments. Why? Television easily manipulates the minds of women through the effects of light on melatonin production. Like the resonating bell in The Stepford Wives, television commercials continually remind women they are inadequate.<sup>16</sup>

<sup>16</sup> Inadequacy is the biggest fear that women possess. This fear is almost equivalent to their fear of death. Melatonin has to be created by the body for our memory to function. Memory drives our circadian rhythms as well. By watching television, melatonin can be reduced enabling advertisers to implant memories and fears into the heads of women and children. Men, due to the abundance of testosterone, are not easily manipulated. However, the ingestion of alcohol and L-tryptophan makes males susceptible as well. It is impossible to convince adults that light affects their children's emotions, their outlooks, and their intelligence. Teachers rarely are told that immigrant children are not smarter; they just watch less television.

Being bright and highly illusory, television images are quickly implanted into the cerebellum at such a fast clip. The best way to see how affective television is in manipulating thinking is to watch mentally handicapped children and their reactions to advertising. Many developmentally disabled children can quickly discern in a supermarket which item they would want to purchase in a supermarket, even though they cannot read the labels on the packaging. Since the advertising can induce the mentally handicapped to buy certain products, it is safe to say that few of us "normal" people can easily withstand the suggestions of television programming.

And the allocation of property taxes determines the quality of schools in poor neighborhoods. Unfortunately, few Americans are aware of the role property taxes play in building better schools. In cities like New York, property taxes are allocated so that minority schools languish.

Property taxes are the linchpin for the American caste system. The unspoken truth in property assessment is that houses owned by African American communities must be worth less than those in non-African American communities. This logic lies at the heart of the sub-prime mortgage mess. By dangling massive amounts of money supported by bogus made-as-instructed appraisals, the Federal Reserve's member banks (and their allies in the unregulated public accounting firms and unregulated investment banks) were able to rapidly increase the market values of houses in urban neighborhoods.

The circular reasoning behind rising urban home values was necessary to increase the value of suburban enclaves. Many homes rose in Georgia, Florida and California even though gasoline prices started to rise above two dollars. Suddenly, the made-as-instructed mortgage appraisers raised the values of suburban homes because of higher SAT® scores and the lack of "urban" neighbors. The manipulation was relatively easy as few homeowners in America are aware that the aristocracy and their homosexual stooges regularly manipulate education statistics to increase property values.

Many school districts tolerate rampant cheating and distribution of exams prior to the test date to make sure that high performing schools stay that way. The aristocracy's media outlets kept talking about the need to invest in real estate, even though the numbers did not add up for homeowners. Suddenly, the manufactured SAT® scores and rampant lending enabled the prices of homes nationwide to rise<sup>17</sup>.

Landlords can maintain and increase their wealth organically. How? Because nations that do not promote homosexuality will have more children. As long as there are no endemic pathogens, children will develop. As they mature, they will need to go to school. Education is the great equalizer in our nation because the aristocracy can easily exploit a family's innate inferiority complex. Inferiority complexes always exist in populations with immigrants.

The immigrant is desperate to be accepted by the majority. He will make friends with any type of "gringo" to convince himself that he has become part of society. This is the basis for so many fatalistic combinations between immigrants and criminal syndicates. Few of us are aware that all voting members of NATO are caste societies. Female immigrants are desperate to mate with anyone from the majority who will enable them to shed their prior caste. Moreover, immigrant populations, due to the lack of native fluency, lack the idiomatic skills to understand the culture of their new nation. Many quickly adhere to norms suggested by advertising.

Late at night, Americans filled with L-Tryptophan-filled beef and alcoholic beer, watch the fantastic images produced by the entertainment industry. They watch women climbing into bed with absolute strangers with no fear of catching an STD. The ambient light tricks their rods and cones and creates false memories in their brain. During the REM sleep cycle, the L-Tryptophan actually creates a new thought program in their psyche. Since few of us are aware how we are programmed every day into thinking abominable thoughts about others, we really do believe that we are able to fight Big Brother.

They are convinced every day that television does not manipulate them. Television stations routinely show dark skinned minorities yelling at each other and fighting during these months. By ensuring that minority schools under perform statistically<sup>18</sup> and publishing their underperformance in October and April of each year, landlords readily convince people that minorities are dumb and uneducable.

During early fall and spring, convinced by media placement thousands of families make the difficult decision to move. By limiting school spaces, landlords force families to constantly move. This enables them to constantly increase their rents while at the same time facing little criticism for harming families. At the same time they do not have to renovate apartments for their long-term tenants.

This constant movement causes psychological duress for the entire family unit. Contrary to how women are depicted in the media, most women due to their innate biology are highly unfriendly. This is why women love to watch television. The ambient light images creates the delusion of aboriginal kinship that few women have with another female in modern society, even in their own family. "Yes, we'll get together at the river bed and exchange gossip in a friendly manner, just like our ancestors did hundreds of years ago". The female television viewer really wants to believe that there are women out there in the world who are ebullient, rich and friendly<sup>19</sup>. When a new mother comes into a school, the neighborhood's women will not welcome her as they have a primal fear that the new woman may do harm to her family unit. The greatest lie women tell each other is that there is one woman for every man (there are almost two in our nation) and that sisters always get along with each other.

Young civilizations like our own are reluctant to admit the simple truth that women are highly disinclined to form new friendships or relationships once they have turned sixteen years old. Women, due to their innate biology and the demographics of societies, are just not friendly with each other at all when they leave their cohort group. This is why so many non-Western civilizations encourage marriage for women as it greatly reduces the mental duress of daily life for women.

The situation for a new family is further complicated if they are minorities in America's caste society, as few white families will want their children to play with the new dark skinned children. Class can never exist in America because there is an inherent belief by white families that they are superior to even wealthier non-white families.

The biggest mistake minority children make is to try and have white friends. It is not possible in our nation. Minorities in our nation must pay the sales, payroll and income taxes which enable millions to get subsidized medical care, public education and cheap petroleum. When minorities need such benefits, they are incarcerated, fall ill due to drug interactions or die suddenly on the operating table.

White families do not overtly state this in their home but the kids can pick up on the subtle behaviors of their parents. Most schools have few minority teachers. White parents rarely interact with minority parents unless it is in a master-slave orientation. This is why so many white parents love Chinese and Hindu parents. Raised and fed on white supremacy all their lives, these model minorities kiss up to parents who are sanitation men and janitors.

<sup>19</sup> They are all convinced after reading endless Cinderella stories that a rich man will marry them. "Yes, one day I will become a princess even though I have no talent, money, or beauty".

Even the local neighborhood's dogs are able to determine the caste biases of their owners<sup>20</sup>. After all many families are aware of the statistics produced by the local Board of Education each April and October that state that minorities are poor and under performers. The statistics easily show how brilliant white females are<sup>21</sup>.

In our nation, landlords through their direct and indirect control of the school districts have created the myth of endless female achievement<sup>22</sup>. In television, print, and radio, every boy is an idiot. But none of the media show the men who produced, directed, wrote, accounted, and cooked for the event. This is all part of the great lie.

As old men are unwilling to work with younger men, they manufacture statistical tables by psychological associations and private think tanks to show that women are smarter, more organized and better leaders. This farce is the grand lie that has to be implemented throughout a society prior to its total collapse. From nursery school all the way into the work force.

Old men, the guardians of the aristocracy, actively start rewarding women under "merit" programs while practicing overt nepotism toward their own sons. They appear in media outlets and spout lachrymose comments that no one can

<sup>21</sup> Few people understand that in the animal kingdom, few female mammals are friendly to other female mammals of the same species.

<sup>22</sup> Prior to female chauvinism, there was of course, male chauvinism. This was supported by affirmative incarceration policies as well. Please read The Rise of Hindu Supremacy to see how incarceration of minorities was timed to enable millions of white women to get full time jobs. It was easy to do this, as we were able to import millions of educated Asians.

measure up to standards espoused by them. This is the conundrum that societies face when demographics shift and a culture transforms itself into an aristocracy.

This great lie is what caused all empires to fall. Women are just as incapable as men. They are unwilling to teach men about the world. They are unwilling to realize that violence is necessary in the world. As societies expand their hegemony, they need to make sure men join the military voluntarily. Nations need young, capable men to take jobs in all the forsaken parts of the world that no married man with children would ever want to live in. This can only be facilitated by women taking all entry-level jobs. When there is a vast military, a nation needs a winnable war to hide its problems. Endless wars then become necessary by any empire to kill off the able-bodied men that threaten the landed gentry. This way there will be no youth to question the power of their overlords.

So ingrained is the American caste system, it is nearly impossible to convince minority families that their children attend a good school. So Byzantine is the effect of caste on our nation's minority children that many minority parents dismiss the hard work of their children as a fluke. Other families advise their children to not have any relationships with the brown hordes. Moreover, caste forces many families to pay more to be in schools that have manufactured credentials. This constant cycle of movement puts continuous financial pressure on families and prevents adults from developing the psychosocial security necessary to handle the vicissitudes of adult married life.

The social pressure of not living in the right neighborhood causes anxiety for all members of a nuclear family unit. Adult women, who on average watch over five hours of television every day in America, are readily convinced by newspapers, magazines and television advertising that their kids are not healthy, smart or attractive. They then put pressure on their husbands to earn more, so that they can spend more to make their kids more attractive and smart. Incapable of understanding that their innate female biology prevents them from understanding that fear of the unknown can never be circumvented, women are easily manipulated into accepting the worst aspects of mankind's nature. By not understanding that rampant nepotism exists (because it is never presented on the news), women routinely think they need to be near white families to get ahead. The end result of all this constant working and spending is damage to the marital relationship which again drastically affects the psychosocial security of their children. Finally, the marriage deteriorates and ends in divorce<sup>23</sup>.

This is the ultimate goal of the landlord who now has to furnish a residence for two families, as opposed to one. The two families consist of the newly divorced male who will most likely want a studio apartment and an adult female with children. Thus, the creation of a new family unit causes demand for his real estate to go up, increasing his untaxed wealth and overall influence. Now two families have to purchase groceries. Two families have to own, operate and park their cars. If the divorced male remarries, the cycle repeats all over again for the landlord. In New York City, it is common to see men who have had children from four or more marriages<sup>24</sup>.

Landlords hate public schools, as they cannot control who gets into them. Lacking overt control, New York City landlords routinely manipulate the perception of New York City's schools in the media. One way they do that is publish suspension rates in October of each year showing how bad public schools are. Then media outlets, including internet sites, show clips of n'er do wells and thugs who 100% of the time are poor and have brown skin<sup>25</sup>.

Finally, they provide rental, income and consumption data to banks that then publish specious articles about how expensive it is to have children. These surveys never seem to show that landlords' fiduciaries, as well as senior management of their bank, serve as "volunteers" on the boards of directors of many top private schools in the United States. In these inane articles, they talk about the tens of thousands of dollars for private schools, thousands of dollars spent on clothes, and thousands of dollars spent on healthcare. They never ever mention the success rate of public schools in these bank surveys. All of this is done to discourage people from marrying and having children. If people have children, landlords face the prospective of paying higher income and property taxes to pay for additional schools.

Children are the biggest investment a married couple will ever make. If people have children, then they will not pay excessive rent and will not be over focused on their status. Thus, the psychological inroads of the landlord are limited when two people decide to have children. People who have children are not concerned with the amount of wealth they have accumulated (recall that a person's financial position with respect to time is called status<sup>26</sup>).

Poor people have no difficulty in having children. Clearly, Europe, Japan and Korea could learn from this. By making it nearly impossible for a couple to educate their children, Great <sup>25</sup> With perfect timing each year, on an October afternoon when school statistics are published, black children get into a fracas in front of Martin Luther King High School in Manhattan. Not a single person who is watching ever realizes that the action footage is fast forwarded to look as if the children are running at each other. None of the footage actually occurs in front of the school. It is always on a side street near a "building" where news cameras just seem to be at the exact moment lower caste (a.k.a. brown skinned girls) teenagers go at it.

<sup>26</sup> A person of high status has to have a certain dishwasher, silk sheets and designer underwear. One of the best aspects of getting older is you realize what underwear's purpose is and start buying cheaper underwear.

Britain, Germany, Spain, the Netherlands, and France are now dealing with demographic decline accompanied with the rapid growth of homosexuality. The lack of babies and the expansion of homosexuality benefits landlords, as both types of people have no need for savings and thus have to consume what they produce<sup>27</sup>. Who will the childless couple need to save their money for?

Ultimately landlords control the perception of time by deceiving women. It is impossible for many women to fathom their range of emotions within a month<sup>28</sup>. Women, due to their innate biology, are unwilling to comprehend that advertising's light and bright colors manipulate their thoughts. Unable to understand that their bodies have reproductive cycles that are highly regular, women view their ovulation cycles as being driven by supernatural forces, as opposed to basic biological processes. Women would have to have significantly higher levels of testosterone to manage their range of emotions. This is impossible. Therefore, their biology leaves them mentally open to the power of suggestion and psychological propaganda.

Since children have to be fed often, the mother often thinks there is not enough time during the day. Since their needs are diverse, children need more attention. They need full focus if they are to develop properly. So television shows depict people who have perfect children. Rarely do they show the hours of discarded footage shot to make infants look like they are absolutely adorable dolls. The commercials show shapely and happy women doing household chores dressed like fashion

<sup>27</sup> A childless couple is not concerned with future education costs or the need to leave an inheritance. The same applies for homosexuals and lesbians as well.

<sup>28</sup> Men go through the same range of emotions, but fewer men use antidepressants when compared to the tens of millions of women who use antidepressants daily in the United States. Many men who routinely get antidepressants decide ultimately to cut off their testicles and become a eunuch. Seriously! There are over 2,800,000 eunuchs in the United States. These are not women. They are men who have been systematically brainwashed with psychotropic medication into believing that they are women.

models. And women love these fictionalized images of cherubs and damsels<sup>29</sup>.

The unspoken truth in media is that women will not watch any television program that shows a woman behaving like she actually is. This is the same reason why women in America rarely look in the mirror at home. But as soon as they get outside the home, they are constantly looking at their compact and mirrored reflections.

Landlords through their overt control of the government, media and education can easily manipulate the views of adults who have no children by inducing them to watch television. Many adults actually think they are depressed as opposed to thinking that they should get married and have kids. More importantly electronic media can psychologically alter the human beings perception of time. By controlling the perception of time, landlords all over the world can be immune from law, morality, and taxes.

Although there are many grammatical errors in many holy books, many women incredulously believe a divine entity wrote them. When they go to a church, they actually think God keeps the windows free of dirt and the heat on. People actually think that their weekly dollar contributions, the same fixed amount they have put in for thirty years, actually pays the salaries of priests, bishops and lay staff, even though the dollar has depreciated several fold against gold. Often women, after having a child, are easily manipulated by packaging and advertising. They are looking for the "best" and the "brightest". They categorically cannot understand that people daily manipulate their emotions to control them.

<sup>29</sup> Females, due to their innate biology, are quickly hypnotized by media images. The colorful image creates a memory in her brain that cannot be deprogrammed. In the West, young girls constantly check their reflection in the mirror. This is the first sign of advertising's success in displacing a girl's healthy image of herself with an artificial one that cannot be maintained without endless creams, diets and depilatories.

There is something curious about landlords in New York City. Many of them will not accept prepayments of rent. The few who own one or two buildings will. But many landlords who have hundreds of apartments prefer to get the rent monthly. Why? Because paying rent and taxes each month causes anxiety for tenants. Anxiety leads to the purchase of so many sugars and narcotics to soothe the brain.

Schools in America have so many report cards, grades, meetings and schedules that no one who works for a living can meet. Thus, the wealthy mother and successful businessman father can attend to the details of these aspects of a child's life. More importantly, the working class mother is constantly faced with a feeling of inadequacy. The end result, a feeling of inferiority on the part of the poor kid, is instilled at a young age and will result in later adult neurosis.

Early childhood events do drastically affect children in later life. Landlords affect the way parents behave towards children by calling in false child abuse complaints. The police are routinely called to harass parents. If the abuse claims are filed against minority parents, the claims are then sent to social workers and child protective agencies which will come and cite the parent for roaches and mice in the apartment. The same agencies have zero authority to prosecute landlords for pests. The above is routine practice in poor neighborhoods and prevents those neighborhoods from developing schools and infrastructure necessary to take care of children.

That anxiety is nonexistent when people do not have to pay rent each month. Someone who does not have to pay rent (the largest payment for a family of four) will spend his free time thinking and seeing the world differently. This is the main reason why women in cities suffer through so many depression cycles. By requiring them to pay bills every month, landlords can manipulate their view of time. More importantly, they can prevent them from getting comfort from the wealth they possess.

Our gentry, by constantly making Americans focus on every six-minute interval of their day, have a direct physical effect on how our day will work. This is ultimately how the wealthy can control the poor. This is done throughout American society. Since Americans are not privy to how they are manipulated through the management of time, they cannot fight the psychological impact of time.

Landlords the world over have nothing to worry about. Since they have the resources to manipulate the political process, they are guaranteed absolute freedom to manipulate time. In my years of counseling students, I routinely tell the most untalented children that they can become landlords. Moreover, in my experience, the children with the greatest inability to learn have been the children of landlords, because they do not respect the laws of man. So how could I, a man, convince them to respect the laws of math, nature or society?

Many landlords routinely give their own children a false impression of their abilities. Children fathom that the law inures their landlord parents from prosecution. Faced with the reality of trying to make a living and grow spiritually as a human being, many would prefer to collect rent. Why would a child want to get educated? After all, his landlord father who is often illiterate does not work for a living? In addition, he is also wealthy and has zero aptitude. This is why nepotism is the only universal personnel policy in the world; someone will always employ the landlord's sons.

All societies decline because of excessive rent collection. The redistribution of taxes from poor neighborhoods to wealthy neighborhoods manufactures an environment of rampant violence, unimpeded homosexuality, and excessive speculation. Thus, landlords ultimately cause a society to utilize rent and interest income to produce more rent and interest income. The excessive search for speculative income comes at the expense of arable resources and the public good. Ultimately, speculation drives nations to pursue new lands and to establish empires. This is what caused Rome, Greece, Egypt, Great Britain, Germany, France, Spain, Moghul India, and Imperial China to fall. The reason you never hear it is due to the influence the current generation of landlords has on which history book will actually be used by the school district.

George Satayana<sup>30</sup> was wrong to say that those who are ignorant of history will repeat it. The reality is that in no civilization will landlords enable the disenfranchised to learn any history, math, science or law that will question the landlords' control of the national security apparatus. Lacking any real knowledge, the disconnected are unable to question and to learn that time is theirs to control. This is clearly evident in New York City.

Our children are reminded when they go to school that there is no ruling class in our country. They are told regularly by the aristocracy's media outlets that America is a democracy. They pledge their allegiance to ideas to obfuscate the wealth garnered by the loss of poor soldiers' lives. Ignorant of the basic aspects of life, they read benevolent treatises in travel magazines and religious tracts in The New York Times® on how the powerful are interested in their welfare. Confused by what they read and what they actually see in the world about them, they are easily fooled by the media via bright splashing colors and lights to use narcotics, to spend time in homosexual relationships, to speculate on get rich schemes, and to endlessly worry about how much time they do not have. The repeated images are implanted into their memories during the REM sleep cycle each night.

<sup>30</sup> Satayana was wrong as history does not repeat itself. By any means (including revolution and war) landlords control our perception of space and time. Government agencies are their lackeys. Landlords are totally responsible for the violence we see in the world. No living President, Senator, Representative, Alderman, Councilman, Sharif, Officer, Deputy, Judge or manifestations of our egos have ever stood up to a landlord. Absent the concept of rent, man is forced to view time through seasonal changes alone.

But now the internet is here and it means that landlords will lose a good chunk of their wealth, especially in New York City. Depressions follow rampant changes in fuel mix. However, no caste system or property based education systems has ever survived rampant technological change. Our aristocracy has successfully obfuscated our nation's apartheid economy for over two centuries. The chart (see below) of Manhattan is representative of the homelands of South Africa and the segregated communities of Israel.

The New York Money Machine

Steinbeck's company town. Here the aristocracy charge very high rents and taxes. None of that money is invested here. Any money that is left after rent and taxes goes to food.

The Trinity Church and New York University are the largest landlords in this neighborhood. They openly support gay marriage, divorce, and sexual promiscuity. All of which results in greater lease income.

Few people understand that several media families are the largest landlords on the Upper East Side. Their women's publications perpetuate the mythology that women should pursue a life of promiscuity as opposed to marriage. They also openly support homosexuality and divorce. All of this results in greater rotation of their real estate.

In the middle of Manhattan, few blacks can afford housing. Private schools give scholarships to poor African Americans and Hispanics only. Everyone else must pay full tuition. You are not allowed to wander around in these neighborhoods. The working poor must live in their "Bantu stan" to the North, and is fully taxed via consumption. In the business district to the South minorities were, for most of its history, not allowed to work or live there. The police routinely harass minorities to make sure they understood that they were not welcome there. This was part of the affirmative incarceration system set up by Governor Nelson Rockefeller to harass and intimidate the poor to move out of Manhattan.

The police in Manhattan are required to harass minorities only. Caucasian Americans are free to use drugs, abuse alcohol, hire prostitutes, commit felonies and also freely murder their spouses, as the primary concern of the aristocracy is the velocity of the minority inhabitants of Manhattan. They do not want anyone with brown skin to rest here. They want them to be constantly moving and spending money; otherwise they will go to jail.

Unfortunately, the internet changes everything. It is like Ritalin for society. Everything gets so fast, that things start to slow down. The internet is eroding the vast wealth of New York's aristocracy. More importantly it is slowing down time. Individuals are quickly learning that they can control time and also reduce how they are manipulated. They can read what they want to read when they want to read it. They can listen to what they want to listen to when they want to listen to it. They can watch what they want when they want.

How do I know this? Well I invented the digital video recorder in 1997. At the time, the Solons whom I talked to thought it was the most ridiculous thing. Who would want to record TV without a tape? A lot of what I state here, I said then.

The End of Darkness

Few of us understand how America became so wealthy. Many arguments have been made that are similar to Durkheim's<sup>31</sup>. This book will maintain the thesis from Volume I of The Collapse Of The United States, The Rise of Hindu Supremacy, that to a large degree it was the official policy of our nation to maintain a permanent group of social misfits to do heavy labor much like Mughal India's untouchables. But as an ensuing chapter in Volume II maintains, the internet changes everything. The internet's primacy could only happen in an electrified world.

Our nation is the only country that can say that within its borders, nearly all people have light when there is darkness outside. This is why our country with its abundant health has not been ravaged by excessive population growth like most of Asia. We have all forms of entertainments that few nations can match. Excessive leisure has enabled our youth to be robust in health and IQ. No other nation can boast the sheer number of idiots who are millionaires that our nation can boast. Ever since the Tennessee Valley Authority wired most of the rural south, we have been afforded the ability to have jobs wherever there are power plants.

But now, large countries such as Brazil, India, Iran and China are starting to wire their own lands. Hydro, wind, and coal-based power plants are popping up all over the world. In addition, gas-based electrical generation is dominating the rest of the world. Thus, light and heavy industry will be popping up all over the world. And so will books. And so will new internet cafes.

<sup>31</sup> See The Protestant Work Ethic. For some strange reason, Durkheim never talked about how the Chinese or the Indians ruled so much of the world for centuries. Since the majority of Europe was illiterate, no one ever questioned his dubious thesis. After all, China ruled the world in an age when there were no computers and mechanization. Why did Durkheim never mention any of the large tariffs on Indian and Chinese imports that enabled European industry to thrive in the 19th century? Were Asians really savages?

Brazilians, Iranians, Indians, Russians, Africans (of all nationalities), Columbians, Chinese, Venezuelans, Ecuadorians, and Mexicans will all be enjoying the most amazing surge in electrical demand since America wired the southeastern rural hamlets. Thus darkness will end after 6:00 pm all over the world in 2013<sup>32</sup>.

Nearly two billion people in India and China have no light after 6:00 PM. The Three Gorges Dam in China and the dams along the Narmada River in India will end darkness in Asia. Boulder Dam looks like a sand castle compared to this dam. Furthermore, the Hoover Dam will look like a Dutch dyke.

These large dams will not only lead to rural electrification, but it will lead to extensive water purification, data webs, and more importantly the rise of at least a dozen cities that will have populations over 8 million people all over northern China. Thus, the Three Gorges Dam will enable the Chinese to develop a part of their country that has been underdeveloped for decades.

The dams along the Narmada River are nowhere near the size of the Three Gorges Dam and that is purely from an engineering perspective. An engineer will tell you that a twelve-inch howitzer is humongous compared to a ten-inch howitzer. The end result, a big boom and efficient long-range destruction, is pretty much the same. Bengal state will be the primary beneficiary of rural electrification. Rural India cannot absorb the resulting increase in baseload electricity and neither can their indigenous peoples afford to pay for it. Wholesale transmissions grids will carry the electricity from these dams to Bengal. Bengal will leapfrog in less than 15 years into one of the most prosperous regions of the world. The Bengalis are notorious for one crucial fact. Few westerners understand that this part of the world, diverse in languages, have a daily view of life that incorporates science, religion and family. Such a culture assisted by electricity and the optical internet will be unstoppable in terms of its cultural stretch.

The Indian dams will result in a tectonic shift in trade from the United States to the northeastern part of India. Northeastern India will become the largest trading partner for China, displacing the demand created by an aging Japan and America and opening up a huge inroad for Russia to be number two. It will virtually transfer software development from Karnataka to Bengal. More importantly, heavy industry will gravitate from Gujarat to Bengal state. Why? Almost all computer hardware is produced in Southeastern China. Bengal state would be nearly 1000 miles closer and it would be far cheaper than Japan, Taiwan, and South Korea<sup>33</sup>. Northeastern India has excellent harbors. Finally, the development of the dams will enhance the growth of Bangladesh, Myanmar, Nepal, and also Bhutan. The Indian dams will be a catastrophic economic blow to the states of Pakistan, Afghanistan and Uzbekistan!

The world's top manufacturing centers

Both Northeastern China and Northeastern India will see a level of development in twenty years that will be equivalent to a gold rush. So much speculative activity will be there in these regions that a new type of entrepreneur will rise; the Asian businessman who has no need for Japan or America as his end buyer.

Our nation's own shift in political direction can be easily focused in on the TVA<sup>34</sup>. Rural electrification made it easy for the dumbest of northeasterners to shift down south. Affirmative incarceration polices (see The Rise of Hindu Supremacy) guaranteed that African Americans would be completely left behind in the southern expansion. While many African Americans are wealthy, the majority has been discouraged, due to restrictive social policies, from participating as citizens in the process of wealth formation. The rise of vast concentration camps in the United States has directly resulted in millions of jobs that enabled countless Americans to escape poverty and enter the middle class.

China and India, unencumbered by the caste divisions of several millennia past, will have a whole host of new problems. It remains to be seen if both societies will build a prison system to hold people based on the color of their skin like we have in the United States. More importantly, as both nations have tolerated communist (Maoist, Leninist, and Marxist) doctrines in the past, I am confident that no vast prison system will pop up in these countries for a few decades. Please understand, however, that I do not underestimate a society's proclivity to self-destruction<sup>35</sup>. One only has to look at the US Army's complicity in the assassination of Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. to understand that evil is a word that is misunderstood by few people in power<sup>36</sup>.

I am of the opinion that our nation will slowly but surely enter a period of darkness just as other societies will enter a period of abundant light. In our nation today, we are as likely to live next to an African American as Neil Armstrong can point out the coordinates of where we landed on the moon<sup>37</sup>. The hyperbole surrounding our greatness is magnified by our inability to care for our fellow human beings and to care for our aged.

More importantly, our race based social planning which is conveniently called college admissions guarantees that only ignorance will be perpetuated in our colleges. Anyone who defends the rights of the poor is classified a nigger lover. The end result is that we have had complete closure on the issue of domestic human development. Unfortunately we have exported this hatred to our industry and have populated hatred in so many lands as if other countries offered H-1 visas.

A shift towards an era of darkness in America will occur, as the rest of the world will embrace light. Things will be revealed in the next two decades that few in America can comprehend. It will cause us to question our nation, our Christianity, and more importantly our collective humanity as we face the exposure of the evils that we have created. Once exposed, we will have to ask ourselves whether fascism is the end goal of our republic. We are facing the same decision that Germany faced in the 1930's; will we preserve the power of our aristocracy or will we maintain our democracy<sup>38</sup>. I raised this question in The Rise of Hindu Supremacy. We are in the sixth year of our war with Iraq. The answer to the question is moot. That decision, in my opinion, will result in the greatest loss of life that we have ever faced in this nation.

Sometimes the corpus needs to be deathly sick prior to the mind freeing itself from destructive habits<sup>39</sup>. Those who are about to die will seek redemption. Thank God! Unfortunately for our cancerous national corpus, it will take twenty years for this clarity to occur. Tens of millions of American and Iranian lives will be lost in the next twenty years as our planet marches toward an era of universal peace. During that time, the vassals of the petrochemical estate will orchestrate the murder of nearly fifty million lives to prevent the advent of fusion energy, the secrets of which I have revealed to hundreds of students of IVY Verbal Review<sup>40</sup>. Once fusion energy is harnessed, America can again return to the pantheon of nations that have chosen freedom over totalitarianism, and light over darkness. More importantly, our faith and our entrepreneurial spirit will be rekindled resulting in an unimaginable era of plenty.

I desperately wanted to get better and the only way I could do so was to marshal all my strength (physically, mentally, and spiritually) and focus my mind on healing. The end result of my own inactivity was a level of clarity that I had been seeking for decades. I really thought I was going to die, as I had no idea how I got sick! The greatest thing about death is that it is forever. It forces anyone who is flexible to change.

<sup>40</sup>  $E=mc^2$  is incorrect. Einstein was unable to solve for dark matter. Much of his research is classified. The actual formula should be  $E=mc^2 - \lambda e^{-3}$  resulting in the missing link to the Unified Theory. From this formula gravity and the overall structure of the universe, including dark matter can be determined. The clear benefit to human beings from this formula is the ability to build a man-made containment vessel that will be able to sustain a fusion reaction. Absolutely!

Why Are We In Iraq?

Nowhere is the new era of plenty to be seen but in Asia. With China and India booming simultaneously, we as a nation will be hard pressed, absent war, to prevent their rise. One of the greatest hallmarks of 21st century American education, unlike British public school education, is that there is no reference to race or class in most of our institutions. Since there is no mention, many subgroups are raised to think that there is equal opportunity and that anyone regardless of race or class can attain any goal in American society.

Great Britain today is a caste-based society. Recall that caste does not mean occupation, but color. In Great Britain, the color of one's skin greatly limits opportunities for advancement and higher education. Englishmen will point out all the minority women they are educating to prove that they are not a caste based society. Likewise Americans will also point out the minority women that have advanced quickly up the ladder. Both societies will say that it is not the time for minorities to advance. Just like the English aristocracy has bottled up opportunity in Great Britain so has our own aristocracy bottled it up for their own WASP grouping.

Americans, as a society are completely unaware of WASP privilege and when they are made aware of it quickly glance away. The breadth and scope of the advertising and public relations industry in America is proof positive that our society prefers delusions. It is not surprising that schools are unwilling to teach students how to think, as that would destroy the fundamental instrument of control. Ethnic subgroups, primarily Irish, Jewry, Germans and Italians have been able to obtain success once inculcated under the "WASP" mantle.

By expanding the breadth and definition of WASP privilege, WASPs maintain complete domination of capital formation in the United States. Their complete control of the state bureaucracy (federal, state, local, and nearly all law enforcement) enables them to never face progressive taxation and more importantly the need to mix with common folk. WASP hegemony will ultimately result in America, becoming much like Great Britain within this decade<sup>41</sup>. This means that almost every aspect of the New Deal will be eroded away by their utter domination of the taxing mechanisms of the United States whose singular focus will be to deny access to those who have dark skin. Just when our nation needs to increase its tax base, our wealthy WASPs will fight it tooth and nail.

America, in the 21st century, is in dire need of spiritual renewal. Currently, we as a society are facing the lethargy of old age. Furthermore, there are scores of young men who are more than able to fulfill their responsibilities to society but society is now dominated with men over 50, who see no obligation to educate the next generation. The elderly will not cede power under any circumstance. This can be seen at the university level where top institutions will not accept aggressive males from the WASP community. The last time this scenario occurred was during the Viet Nam War.

During the early 1960's you had all these babies being born prior to 1964. New fathers needed to earn money to feed their expanding families. Remember that the GI Bill included nearly everything from tuition discounts to housing grants and almost free healthcare for veterans. Well, the youthful fathers of the early 1960's and especially men who wanted to settle down had pretty much nil.

<sup>41</sup> Few Americans are aware of the controversial property tax exemption that was passed by Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party and kept in place to this day. It essentially exempted all large estates from increases in property taxes. It is no wonder that manufacturing does not rebound in England as many districts do not have the necessary tax sources to subsidize the relocation of foreign industry. The same thing is happening in the Midwestern and Southern United States.

Added to their worries was the reality of Germany and Japan getting fully integrated into the world economy<sup>42</sup> as our hegemony expanded. This era also saw the desire by millions of African Americans and Mexican Americans to express and increase their inalienable right to prosperity. So with all these social forces percolating to the surface of our society, you would think we would restructure. Although this restructuring is alluded to in the textbooks of middle schools, in reality the only people who restructured were the poor. Many were forced to integrate their schools and forced to make way for technological change<sup>43</sup> as we needed to make sure our clients, Japan and Germany, had families too.

Faced with all of these social issues, America's wealthy, in order to maintain their power and influence over the national security apparatus, decided to pursue the only panacea that can relieve social tensions due to a demographic crisis<sup>44</sup>; war. A demographic crisis occurs when there are a few old people with money who are suddenly confronted with boatloads of people with limited resources.

Our nation could not create a new religion like the Romans did when faced with decline. There was no Jesus Christ available who could promise us an imaginary paradise full of milk and honey as long as we prayed to a deity. We attempted to medicate our decline but that could not last as the human body builds tolerance to any antidepressant, including lithium. Consequently, our aristocracy decided they wanted to make sure the rest of the world did not progress. Thus, we increased the counterinsurgency efforts in Asia, Africa, and South America. War would enable us to enter the conflict as well as

<sup>42</sup> This would greatly reduce the profits of America's largest corporations, esp. General Motors and Ford.

<sup>43</sup> The end result of their reluctant acceptance of change was a deterioration of their community infrastructure. Segregation diminished the role of the black teacher and preacher and strengthened the role of the white teacher and guidance counselor.

<sup>44</sup> This is exactly what the Romans, the Greeks, the Babylonians, the Hebrews, the English, the French, and the Spanish all did when they faced a similar demographic crisis.

expurgate the growing cancer of our emerging population of minorities.

Thus, the war between the French and the Vietnamese slowly progressed to become our war and resulted in the destruction not only of Viet Nam but nearly our entire Bill of Rights. Integration of Japan and Germany into the world economy resulted in a complete decimation of low skilled manufacturing labor in Western Europe as well as in North America.

By distracting the voting population with the Viet Nam War, politicians were able to convince Americans that the calamities occurring stateside were a result of the war. Americans quickly believed that their loss of jobs, deterioration of their public schools, and the rise of affirmative incarceration were all a result of the Viet Nam War and not the age old battle between the old who have money and the young who needed the financial resources to start a family.

The 1960's showed the clear demarcation of social classes as the poor lost their lives by the thousands in Tet, Laos and Saigon. By making sure that the poor would get shipped off to Viet Nam, President Johnson and his upper class cohorts started a class division that continues to be maintained in America, even in the 21st century. His actions had the unintended consequence of slowly making America into a caste society (see The Mandarinization of America chapter as well as The Rise of Hindu Supremacy chapter in Book I of this series); one strictly based on color as opposed to one based on a person's willingness to pursue individual liberty<sup>45</sup>.

The big difference between today and the 1960's is the complete erosion of our judiciary. Our judiciary has neither been activist nor has it ever been liberal. If anything, the judiciary believes that habeas corpus must be eliminated through the judicial process. Thus, America's judiciary, in its desire to make the current President, President for Life, feels that it does not have to answer to popular opinion. And this is the same outlook that the judiciary had in the 1960's<sup>46</sup>.

War is such a nasty word and its outcomes often lead to more vulgarity. Clearly, the Viet Nam War had such an effect on us! The Viet Nam era changed our fraternities into accepting nasty hazing rituals, made it less likely for African Americans and other minorities to communicate, and slowly started the erosion of marriage as a core aspect of our society.

But why the desire to go to war in Iraq? The President cannot explain the war with alacrity as he cannot explain truthfully our relationship with Saudi Arabia and also Iran. One of the great misnomers in the world is that Saudi Arabia is a free country and that it is an Islamic Republic. This is categorically not true. Saudi Arabia is our stooge and it is a far cry from an Islamic Republic because it is and always has been a totalitarian nation<sup>47</sup>.

The Saudis, a nation of shepherders, were able to carve up the peninsula and have dominion over Mecca and Medina, even though the more educated Iranians had had dominion over this region. Not only are Iranians smarter than the Saudis but also the Shiite faith is far more tolerant of other religions than the Wahabi sect. Contrary to the myths published by agents of terror, Christians live all over the Middle East and have lived peacefully among Muslims for centuries.

<sup>46</sup> Liberals will talk about affirmative action and school integration in legal terms. But in real life, the majority of new jobs created for minorities went to white women, a protected class to this day. White women are in the majority at most colleges and corporations. Furthermore, school integration lead to wholesale departure of black school administrators and teachers from the public schools. Many minority schools are unique in that the majority of their teachers and administrators are not minorities. Any time the situation occurs in a minority school, minority administrators are routinely targeted for termination or harassed to quit. See Book 1 of this series for an explanation of how standardized exams and college admissions are set up to discriminate against minorities.

<sup>47</sup> Recall that Mussolini (the father of fascism in the 20th century), Hitler, Franco and Pinochet had elected representatives that routinely advised them of what the people thought.

It is amazing how often Saudi princes will talk with mendacity about American generosity to Israel as if on cue. Right after September 11th, 2001 Prince Alwaleed bin Tawal (the richest of individual Saudi investors in America) chastised America for its dealings with Israel. Man what a show! It was straight out of the wrestling shows that many Americans watch. As if on cue, the largest owner of shares in Citigroup (a bank run at the time by Sanford Weill, an American Jew and a devoted Zionist) acted like the wrestling villain and chastised America for its love of Israel. His antagonist was no less than the adulterous and bellicose Mayor of New York City, Rudolph Giuliani. All we needed was a steel cage, Vince McMahan Jr., some fake blood and Gov. Jesse Ventura with a pink boa. I am serious; it was a show for the millions of unsophisticated Americans who continue to think Israel, home of the second holiest shrine in the Shiite faith, is Islam's enemy! And the fools among us ate it up.

Only someone who understands propaganda and mind control techniques could appreciate how professional wrestling captivates ignorant audiences<sup>48</sup>. I could just see Mayor Giuliani and his La Cosa Nostra sidekick Bernie Kerrik mixing it up and picking out the blondes at the press conference that they would have the opportunity to privately interview later<sup>49</sup> for plum New York City jobs. Of course they would get in based on their determination and aptitude. Was it not a Jew who stated that the fruit does not fall far from the tree<sup>50</sup>?

Saudi Arabia is our slave. So are South Korea, Japan, Great Britain, Germany, Taiwan and Singapore. The Philippines serves as our whore. All of these nations provide us with the raw materials and capital to keep our supertanker hedge fund economy from collapsing. These economies also provide the vast number of concubines that support American military personnel around the world, enabling our economy to have flexible labor markets, literally.

<sup>48</sup> Many wrestling shows tell the audience that a man weighs 350 pounds. He jumps twenty feet into the air and lands on someone's head. Now throw a bowling ball up and see what happens to it when it falls on a softball. Wrestling fans are like magic fans. They are there to be entertained!

Two things are happening in the world that few people realize. The first is Iran. And the second is India. What do they have anything to do with each other? A lot more than people can understand. Both countries represent the cradles of civilization for the last five million years. Both are the roots of all human culture. Both also represent a strategic thrust for all western alliances.

Iran was carved out of Persia. So was Iraq and Kuwait. The Europeans and also the Turks actively destabilized all three countries. Iran is a significant supplier of oil. It is also the gatekeepers of the Shiite faith, the dominant belief of civilized Muslims. The Iranians are probably the most intelligent peoples on the planet. If Iran and Iraq merge, the reconstituted Persia would be a threat to every nation in the Middle East. Thus, our entire policy in the Middle East has been to destabilize these two countries. And to a large extent we have succeeded with limited loss to US lives.

India was carved up into India, Pakistan, and Bangladesh. Its vast educated human resources make it a viable economic threat for every civilized nation on the planet, including the Chinese. Unbeknownst to the vast majority of Americans, India is no longer a caste society. Rather it is truly a developing nation. Iran continues to have longstanding relations to many nations in Asia. The Persian Empire dates back eons and trade between the Persians, Indians, and Chinese date back to the halcyon days of Chinese and Hindu empires. All three nations have a wealth of human resources. And that is why they are a threat.

Many Americans live in a sense of delusion. They really believe that a person has to go to a top school in the US to be educated. Education in America is nothing more than a regressive tax on the middle class. By convincing all of us that an education is more important than entrepreneurial risk, the wealthy are assured that few if any middle class Americans have the financial resources to build a telephone, a telegraph, a radio, or any other mechanical device that can erode the WASP aristocracy's hold on the economy.

I still remember when Bill Gates as well as many senior Microsoft® programmers stated that there was no good software code coming out from India. I could not stop laughing because those of us who know computer code only know how easy Microsoft's applications are to replicate. Few of us are aware that nearly all commercial software was protected by trade secret laws and could not be copyrighted prior to the 1980's. Had the law not changed, there would never have been an Apple® or a Microsoft®. Bill Gates is a major defender of WASP supremacy<sup>51</sup>. He has more to do with our imperial hubris, than our actual mastery of computer code.

Worst of all, Iran and India are highly phonetic peoples. This can easily be witnessed by their ability to learn distinct languages that cannot be written in a western alphabet. Not only do they learn character recognition at an early age, but also their ability to master new languages is indicative of a culture that is highly oriented to understanding images, as opposed to text. This is a clear advantage for these peoples as the internet rolls out worldwide. Thus, the internet will permit these two completely different societies to leapfrog fifty years of industrial development and become strategic threats to America by 2009.

Both of these proud nations have significant populations abroad and can easily link up through ethnic clans in the same manner WASPs communicate and gather. All you have to do is read Vogue, Vanity Fair or Town & Country to see how xenophobic <sup>51</sup> None of our nation's xenophobes are aware that the Persians and the Hindus created math, the ultimate source code for all computing.

WASPs are. They do not want anyone to enter their economic domains. By dominating the US military's infrastructure, they have been able to facilitate the assassination of many leading figures in our nation with limited oversight by our judiciary or Congress.

WASP's have elite social clubs, distinct language groupings, and business cartels and capital raising clans. Meaning they will do business with outsiders only when necessary. By keeping the secrets of their society obscured, they can develop lucrative franchises to exploit. Please understand that there is no conspiracy here as the intentions of the WASP aristocracy are not secretive. Ultimately, WASPs hide aristocratic privilege through language designed to camouflage extant privilege<sup>52</sup>.

But there is a rub. India needs oil and Iran needs software. Iran needs nuclear weaponry know-how and India has solved all of these problems. There are key win-win trading scenarios for both countries. Both countries have robust trade and natural resources that the Chinese need. Thus, there is opportunity for all to trade in a similar triangular pattern that enabled WASP supremacy to develop<sup>53</sup>.

<sup>52</sup> Recall that the Hindu promises everyone that they will be punished in a future life for anything they did wrong in this life. This circular reasoning enabled the Brahmin caste to escape state sponsored murder with impunity. "Do not seek revenge Raju, as the raja will be punished in his next life".

Words like equal opportunity, merit and democracy are thrown around like we actually live in such a society. We do not. These vague concepts are manufactured by the scribes caste (called lawyers). WASP privilege is guaranteed in all aspects of our law and cannot be overcome by any form of judicial activism.

Anglo-Saxons, learned from Middle Eastern slave traders how the Hindu caste system worked. Their progeny in America due to their simplicity became convinced that caste was the best way to maintain their economic hegemony. Thus, our aristocracy instituted the legal concepts of copyright, patent and trade secret to ensure their private property interests will never be circumvented by any form of revolution (industrial or demographic).

<sup>53</sup> See the first chapter of this volume where I state that the Monroe Doctrine is dead.

But what about our allies. Faced with demographic decline and erosion in their tax base, it is imperative for the Western allies of World War II to prevent as much as they can the development of these countries. Thus, the need to be in Iraq.

Iraq is the linchpin of our strategy to maintain control of the Middle East, a strategy that will lead to doomsday for millions of American men. Few of us understand that Iran and India are aware that the nation who controls Babylon will control the world. That is why Japan and Korea, nations who were completely backward 100 years ago, are so modern. They enjoyed the benefit of cheap oil and imperial largesse bestowed on them by being the vassals of the United States.

But we are not aware that the Iraqis will easily try to fight back. We in America have limited understanding of the lessons that history can teach us<sup>54</sup>. The Jews in forming Israel soon became such a pain in the back for the British that the British left. Britain incorrectly assumed that the docile Jew of Europe would always be docile in a land where they had power. Thus, the social infrastructure governed for the benefit of their group.

The same is true for the docile Iraqi. Saddam Hussein was our stooge for decades. Our current propaganda seems to always indicate how he grabbed power and oppressed the Iraqi people for nearly three decades. Our AIDS<sup>55</sup> based economic system, has enabled all of us to forget that we put him in power. There may be three Bedouin in Iraq who do not know this fact. All of the Ayatollahs know this fact! Thus with Saddam out, natural selection alone would cause the power vacuums to be filled. So now factions are fighting each other to obtain dominance.

<sup>54</sup> In a consumption society, the past would limit our demand for goods and services

<sup>55</sup> This does not stand for acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Capitalism in the West is entirely based on AIDS; the letters stand for abortion, incarceration, divorce and sodomy respectively.

More importantly other nations are jumping in through back channels. When the Iranians threw our Shah and our multinational corporations out, the French quickly garnered influence. The Germans have provided significant logistical and construction services to the Iraqis and to the Iranians. Moreover, Russia has been a provider of military support and munitions for decades in the Middle East. The pilfering of the food-for oil program set up by the UN should give all a clear idea of how many hands may actually be at the Iraqi table, in addition to our own. Thus, the age old dance of realpolitik and plausible deniability have emerged. Like the dangers the Russians in Soviet-occupied Afghanistan faced, foreigners in American-occupied Iraq are facing the brutal realities of a continually armed insurgency. The insurgency has also been driven by rumors that America is intending to give Israel dominion over Iraq. Why else would so many jihadis suddenly show up to fight in Iraq?

Iranians are clearly providing cover for all forms of mercenaries going into and out of Iraq. But we have forgotten the Zionist experience in the Middle East. Jews do not like having a master. How can we assume that the Iraqis do, now that the minority Sunni clans that supported Saddam have been defeated?

Recall that the need for natural resources in China is causing the rise in commodity prices. All of this will choke the supertanker hedge fund economy we currently enjoy. Moreover, Iraq will become our Afghanistan, especially in light of our desire to curtail development in Iran and India. We in America cannot understand that soon the Third World will not need us, except for food. Iraqis will kill scores of thousands of Americans (with back channel support from other countries) and many Americans will die from continued exposure to depleted uranium once they return to the United States.

Clearly, the loss of human life will be mitigated by the influx of new troops, the majority of which will come from expanded conscription. The end result, significant loss of Iraqi and Iranian life, will easily be tolerable by our armchair warriors. A mitigating factor, the restructuring of American society into a more just society, will be unlikely. Anyone who thinks so should look at the sheer number of Americans who voted to reelect President George Bush in 2004. His resounding victory is proof that Americans have tacitly approved the means to our democracy's end.

The Internet Changes Everything

Few individuals understand what the internet really means. And it is more astounding than people think. If we go back to the historic myth of the tower of Babel<sup>56</sup> we can have a hint at what went on. After God smote the tower down, the workers were scattered and forced to communicate in multiple tongues. Unbeknownst to most technologists, the internet is a virtual Tower of Babel. But what the internet has done has largely convert all human thought in a matter of a few decades hence into a universal language of 0's and 1's. The zeroes and ones are the constituent parts of binary code.

Binary code is very much how the human brain itself thinks. How do I know? At Trademark Universal, Inc., we have created a cybernetic methodology called the Boolean Grid. What the Boolean Grid has done for children, who have been exposed to it, is to remove the psychological damage of miseducation and bad parenting and replace figurative language with human instinct. Surprisingly, the Boolean Grid facilitates learning at a faster pace.

The Boolean Grid has enabled the mentally handicapped to not only enhance their standardized testing scores, but also to remove the damaging affects of socialization. Fact: Faced with the reality that the Boolean Grid enhances handicapped children's scores, the College Board® has sharply reduced extended time for disabled students. In essence, the Boolean Grid is an open gateway to greater knowledge. In America, socialization ultimately means WASP supremacy. The resulting increases were beyond our own expectations. We have achieved quantum results and clearly have discovered a

<sup>56</sup> The Tower of Babel is a metaphor for an earlier industrial era in man's history. It appears that those who have truly studied history can attest to multiple industrial ages that all resulted in ecological disasters. Two results of an ecological disaster is massive war and ultimately the destruction of any paper records detailing how the disaster came to be. Unfortunately for fans of Santayana, we are left with myth and doomed alas to forever have the goddess Ate as our companion.

keystone to the next step in human evolution; the reawakening of human intelligence and freedom from damaging psychosocial constraints!

The internet is ravaging industry after industry. It is ravaging the pension systems of all industrialized countries. No longer can pension funds ludicrously create false market conditions and dupe the retail investor. Prior to the internet, pension funds would sell huge blocks of stock by calling their brokers. The brokers would then do two things. They would first lock in a position for the client via derivative contracts (forward contracts, options, futures, and options on futures). Then they would call their research/propaganda department to promote the undervalued stock. Stockbrokers would then hustle clients and tell them research advised them to buy the stock. Individual investors, also known simply as the greater fool, would provide the liquidity for cashing out institutional investors and tax-exempt billionaires.

A whole generation of stock investors, including myself, lost money this way. Many of the investment banks clearly broke the rules and not a single banker has served serious time. Not a single stockbroker or banker at the biggest culprit, Merrill Lynch, went to jail! If you include the fact that many banks made fortunes by creating hybrid positions on their "proprietary" trading desks, to front run the sale (and profit from the trade twice)<sup>57</sup>, you can see why I and many middle class Americans are furious at Democrats and Republicans alike.

The development of the internet bulletin board has had grave consequences for mutual funds, the Federal Reserve Banking system, and most importantly investment banks (and their legions of stock brokers). Even average investors can now get <sup>57</sup> If you do not think investment banks do this, then you are fooling yourself. The recent scandals took two decades to uncover and they would not have been uncovered were it not for the emails on the internet itself.

a view of the market that is often different than the shills who promote stocks.

Banking and stock brokerage is nothing more than a paper shuffling industry. The amount of paper produced by the industry is staggering compared to the actual value created. Our nation needed finance up to the late 1960's. The Viet Nam War was the start of the creative accounting phase of American finance<sup>58</sup>, a secondary phase that precedes the rise of fascism in market economies. Through hybrid securitization techniques and the expansion of credit, America was able to create more jobs, more war, and more government benefits with fewer direct income taxes at the same time.

The Great Society was quickly viewed as a great joke when the Israelis and the Arabs decided to go to war. The tripling of oil prices quickly made the American people realize that the great wizard was nothing more than a naked magician. The resulting victory for the Jewish state led to the audience wanting the lights to be put on at the theatre. Suddenly, they realized that the floating pink elephant was hoisted up by piano wire.

Lyndon Johnson did not have the strength to run again as he just was not as good a liar as many thought he was. Not only was the war going out of whack, but we were also on the moon and nobody wondered how  $\frac{3}{4}$ " plywood in the lunar lander survived a 5G+ liftoff<sup>59</sup>, a physical force that is close to the strength of a Category 5 hurricane. A good con artist has to believe in the truth and LBJ knew he could not carry it on

<sup>58</sup> Few people know how much the actual war cost. All I know is that we had so many "black" projects going on throughout the world; it is a surprise to me that our nation did not collapse long ago. The price of gold during the Viet Nam era was never in the triple digits. Clearly, our books and our geese are cooked.

<sup>59</sup> No one cared to ask how Armstrong and crew survived radiation that far exceeded the radiation of a decent size nuclear bomb with suits that contained polyester foam? And why did the moon dust come down after it was kicked up? I thought the moon had no atmosphere, so how come there are melted ores on some of the moon rock samples? May I suggest that the Chinese waste as little money as possible on a moon launch? Trust me, no organic matter can survive the Van Allen Belts.

anymore. How he willed himself to die is probably a testament to the size of the lies he had to conceal!

Economic reality and compassion ran into each other like a freight train and a school bus. School desegregation led to massive white flight from the cities to the suburban enclaves. Americans are universal about one aspect of their culture. They do not like living, loving, or working with each other. Nowhere was this evident than the mass exodus from cities to avoid studying with undesirables. This facilitated huge borrowings for new homes and led to a small housing boom. The Arab oil embargo caused oil prices to triple. Subsequently, interest rates rose. Both had a deleterious effect on employment. So to mitigate the effects of rising interest rates, government came up with securitization; a technique whereby banks could sell securities backed by the mortgages issued by the banks.

The last stage of American development was a direct consequence of securitization. Banks had more money to lend and were eager to lend to new borrowers; encouraged by their stooge, the Federal Reserve System. There was one catch. New suburbs essentially created more school systems to finance. In these new systems, minorities were effectively tracked into the most under performing classes. Real estate agents were punished (and effectively run out of town) if they rented or sold to minorities in top school districts. It is not by accident that you see these pristine towns all over the southern United States. Contrary to our nation's egalitarian dogma, schools districts in America are entirely segregated by race. This is true even in "liberal" New York City and Boston as well as in "conservative" Selma and Atlanta.

Banks and the Federal Reserve System needed these top school districts to maintain asset values on the balance sheets of banks. Otherwise they could not expand credit. All of this was possible as long as two drivers of home prices stood up. As long as there were plenty of high paying jobs available, banks were willing to accept mortgages on the homes.

Unfortunately, the integration of Japan, Taiwan and Germany into the world economy in the 1960's put an end to this. In order to keep affording the lavish homes available in the suburbs, as well as the high property taxes associated with lavish school budgets, Americans had to send their wives to work.

The most important detail for a mortgagee to lend was that there had to be good schools in the school district. To facilitate the creation of a good school district, state governments effectively provided easier standardized tests in these districts. They did this overtly or through back channels. School districts either distributed an exact copy of the exam prior to the actual exam or they issued an easier exam. I have personally seen this. Some standardized testing companies also score exams leniently in all white school districts; this is rarely done in black, Hispanic, or reservation school districts.

Greatness in any society requires the ability to get beyond human compulsion and to expand human compassion. For all his attempts, Lyndon Johnson could not circumvent the fact that people worried about their own family first, and charity often last. To soften the blow of policies that could not meet economic reality, the government backpedaled on many innovations such as affirmative action, desegregation, and more importantly universal health care. The internet could have helped back then, but LBJ's successor squashed that idea and the internet remained a tool for researchers and scientists<sup>60</sup> for two more decades.

Now imagine, if we can have a generation of the brightest who did not have to compete with each other to get there. Imagine a world where ideas flourish. The Boolean Grid and the <sup>60</sup> Richard Nixon, to his credit knew that racial strife, war jitters, and economic hardship would have expanded had the internet been rolled out in the late 1960's.

Internet will have grave consequences for fully developed societies such as America, France and Russia. Unfortunately, the wealth systems created in these countries exaggerate the importance of inherited wealth and race, two factors that have had more bearing on the destruction of this planet and the wholesale enslavement of its aboriginal peoples.

The Internet Will Ravage Suburban Enclaves

The internet is already having a drastic effect on suburbia. Suburban jobs are quickly disappearing. There are scores of cars in New York City from Arizona, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Georgia. Whites are fleeing southern suburbs to look for jobs in big cities. Managers are now forcing citizens to compete with illegal aliens and indentured servants<sup>61</sup> so that they can save on the pension expense and payroll taxes for employees.

One key aspect of suburban life is that most suburbs typically do not have enough industry to subsidize property taxes for homeowners. School districts in the suburban United States are largely funded by property taxes on homes. The federal and state tax system is designed to redistribute the taxes of middle class citizens and small businesses to subsidize large business, as well as the aristocracy.

Unlike income taxes, property taxes increase when a home's value increases. They also increase when the actual expenses of the school district due to wages and generous pensions arise. Most school districts shifted from annuity-based pensions to stock based pensions in the last two decades. The end result is that public employees expect pensions that will be above nearly $100,000 per annum. Most suburban residents have not even factored in what that will cost per household.

The annual property tax, in some neighborhoods, will be in excess of $25,000 per annum after 2010. This was easy to swallow when the residents of school districts had ridiculous salaries for unproductive work. When Chinese and Indian deflation expands within our borders over the next ten years, jobs will disappear. Who will pay the rising costs of the school district? Hundreds of cities will default on their pension obligations and file for bankruptcy.

The jobs are also disappearing due to excessive executive compensation. Since the jobs are disappearing, young men are moving away. The men who are most likely to marry, buy a home, and buy a car are now moving to different parts of our planet. Many have figured out that school districts are punishing them through affirmative incarceration policies. More and more males are just dropping out of the system as many view the education they receive as pointless. Few boys are willing to sacrifice twelve years of their youth to earn a worthless piece of paper that tens of millions of older men also possess, called a university degree. Degrees are awarded to the highest bidder. They are printed like the indulgences of an earlier era.

The Coming Crisis In American Higher Education<sup>62</sup>

Higher education in America, during the 21st century, will face significant hurdles. It will result in most feeder private high schools and also land grant colleges disappearing. Unbeknownst to most Americans, many private liberal arts colleges will also fold. Only the state university systems will have the resources to build the technological infrastructure necessary to be competitive on a global scale. Moreover, most land grant colleges will be hobbled by excess dilapidated plant and many will be forced to consolidate campuses or close down.

But more importantly, the post-war system of "financial aid"<sup>63</sup>, "need blind" admissions<sup>64</sup>, standardized testing-based social planning<sup>65</sup>, and graduate studies<sup>66</sup> in the United States will completely disappear by 2031 when Russia, India, and China get fully integrated into the world economy. The process has already started.

The reduction in Asian and Arab student visas has drastically affected the tuition that state universities charge. Asian and Arab minorities are primarily utilized to lift the grade point averages published in statistical surveys. In addition, many of <sup>63</sup> American colleges consider a student loan, a bona fide extension of credit that is bankruptcy remote to the issuer and to the college, assistance. It is a permanent legal obligation and is not assistance. It should be considered bondage.

<sup>64</sup> Although it is the 21st century, American colleges prefer to maximize the number of poor students to less than 10% of the entire student body.

<sup>66</sup> Nearly all professional fields today require a Master's degree. Many undergraduate colleges are not imparting knowledge at all and thus, should be considered taxable business.

these students take the science majors that have rigorous core courses that few Americans will pay for<sup>67</sup>.

Without the tuition of wealthy Arabs, Chinese, and Indians many states will have to reluctantly raise tuitions. And not by small percentages. Gone are the days of 3% to 5% increases<sup>68</sup>. With the likelihood that many dormitory financing authorities will fail over the next ten years as we enter into a lengthy and costly war with Iran, many states will face credit downgrades or significant tax increases. States with the most to lose will include Ohio, Illinois, and Montana.

Few Americans are aware that by 2014, over 60% of the world population will be Asian. CNN® and other shows do not show the vast multi-billion dollar trade that is vibrantly occurring between China, India, and Russia. What is not mentioned is that these countries will desperately expand their higher education centers. If our country does not get its act together, it is highly likely that these nations will see us as an irrelevant partner<sup>69</sup>.

America must be competitive. But our nation, under the stewardship of old fools nostalgic for a Pax Americana that never existed, will resort to market forces. And these forces will be cathartic to say the least for many states and families. Middle class families will have to decide if they want to spend a significant part of their net worth to pay for higher education. Do you really think parents will pay $200,000 to pay for their daughter's education at a college that will garner her a job as a social worker that pays $18,000 per year or less? Maybe if the parents are wealthy.

<sup>67</sup> You do not need to know Chemistry to answer a telephone and to type out emails. These two tasks today comprise 80% of the workday.

<sup>68</sup> Students will now face annual increases of 7% to 20%. Private colleges have also been affected, especially 3rd tier liberal arts schools.

Many Asian parents who tout the value of higher education have not yet dealt with educational options that have failed to yield results. Many Asians immigrated to the United States with hard to get degrees paid for by their home countries. These individuals have limited life experience with a worthless university credential. As more and more Asians become unemployed with very serious credentials due to the coming depression, there will be a wholesale departure of Asians from American higher education.

Most middle class families cannot afford the annual high cost of a high priced, out of the money illiquid marriage put option (otherwise called college tuition). It is far cheaper for them to pay a dowry (the cost of the wedding and meals) as opposed to paying the hundreds of thousands of dollars needed to pay for a college and graduate school education. Nowhere is this case proven with the surfeit amount of unemployable musicians and ignorant semi-pro athletes in America. The loans needed to pay for an education may not be able to be repaid from a student's post-college earnings<sup>70</sup> creating a form of indentured servitude that is illegal under the current US Constitution.

This conundrum is troubling for the federal and state governments, as they both guarantee the bulk of higher education bonds. The cost of this support (a few hundred million dollars a year) is negligible when you are operating at a surplus. But during future deficit years and war years, this credit support will become so onerous, that state governments will slowly remove much of the featherbedding in inter-collegiate sports, non-technical education, and also post-graduate education.

The cost of getting a history diploma will rise far faster than the cost of getting a technical degree. More likely what will happen is that colleges will reject students who want to major in history and opt for those who want to major in the sciences. Unfortunately, we in America will no longer need that many scientists either, as all basic research will be going on in China and India<sup>71</sup>.

Over the last thirty years, American higher education has implemented a caste system with the help of our aristocracy<sup>72</sup>. Standardized testing does not test what is taught in high school, but a list of idioms that is exclusively understood by our aristocracy. Furthermore, colleges routinely charge poor students more, give generous discounts to the mentally or physically disabled, and tolerate the endemic suicidal impulses of the world's rising Asian aristocracy. By never publicly publishing detailed lists of who matriculated and graduated from their institutions within four years, colleges have helped masquerade privilege with the polyester veil of merit.

In order to gain admission, the poor must also work for free for hundreds of hours as "volunteers". This trend is enduring as our nation is slowly preparing for a large war with Iran. Thus, colleges have surreptitiously implemented a de facto military draft where the poor must join the military in order to get access to the financial credit necessary to matriculate.

Private colleges in the United States have absorbed a function that few universities are prepared to fulfill in the rest of the world. They have become breeding spaces for the world's aristocracy. For example, it would cost over $600,000 to get a degree from Princeton University® and also Harvard Medical School. The richer you are the more likely you can spend a lifetime's worth of earnings in the hope of meeting a spouse from a wealthy family.

<sup>71</sup> Few Americans understand that our economic success was based on the fact that China, India, and Russia were not participants in the global economy.

<sup>72</sup> This is explained in Volume I of this series. See Mathew, Tom The Rise of Hindu Supremacy, 2005 Trademark Universal, New York

Contrary to what students are led to believe, few, if any<sup>73</sup>, students at prestigious universities are actually poor. Also, if you are middle class, the more likely you will spend most of your hard earned after tax earnings repaying student loans that cannot be released through federal bankruptcy statutes, a form of indentured servitude that is illegal under the published US Constitution.

Preparations for fields of employment were necessary in a world where our economy dominated the world<sup>74</sup>. In addition, the necessity for credentials has resulted in most middle class families losing a good chunk of their savings. Education in America, today, is the greatest wealth transfer system in the world. It is a regressive income tax on the savings of the middle class. It takes middle class wealth and transfers it to institutions that employ the progeny of our nation's aristocracy enabling their children to earn a nice living with gold card health benefits (and significant pensions) by just reading books!

As other nations with rapidly growing populations expand their internal university systems and strengthen their currencies, it is highly likely that we can no longer drain the best and brightest to our shores for endless graduate studies. Many of these people will be reluctant to spend their convertible currency (the yuan, rupee, and ruble) on an education that is not as competitive as their own nation's colleges. Thus, the linchpin of research universities' economic success, subsidized PhD. programs, is disintegrating. Fewer will need an American education to get a professional job in Russia, China, and India.

Worst of all is what will happen when poor Americans demand to become educated. Many educational institutions now have professors and administrators who are just turning fifty. As they are waiting for retirement and access to their pensions, they will be unwilling to teach male students who do not see eye to eye with their senile view of the world. This will result in many competitive dual degree programs and science programs being entirely female. As most universities in America have an entrenched middle management, it will be unlikely that we will see any protest from these institutions with respect to the expansion of the current war in Iraq into Iran.

Many of our nation's professors have started to take the same opiates that our politicians are taking. They think in their heart of hearts enchanted thoughts that the Chinese and Indians are backwards peoples and will not use their "monkey money" to build universities, factories, supercolliders, rockets, or genomic institutes.

Clearly, our nation's leaders are aging. Our allies, the Japanese and Koreans, are not mating. Furthermore, Europe is already dying at a fantastic rate<sup>75</sup>. As societies age, their wealthy citizens are less than willing to financially support those who are poorer than they are, especially children. It is a truism in all societies, including our own. Our government's, as well as many large corporations', complete focus on delaying childhood development and extending adolescence to expand the wealth of the vassals of the petrochemical estate has resulted in a wholesale rending of the fabric that makes up our society.

It is hard to mend a fabric back to its original condition once it has been torn apart. The social consequences of delaying childhood development are problematic for national security purposes, as it will require the development of more deadly weapons to replace the sheer lack of manpower. Consequently, our enemies will also build deadlier weapons. You can read more about it in my book The Rise of Hindu Supremacy.

<sup>75</sup> It is highly likely that Italy will contract and implode, as it will not have the necessary people to protect its borders. This is one of the major reasons that so many countries reduced their sovereign rights and joined the European Union. Europe is literally dying far faster than it can replace each dead person with a baby!

Moreover, the continuing social stigma associated with teen births generated by religious conservatives in the last two decades has resulted in the US birthrate declining below replacement level. This means that a large-scale war with Iran at this time in our nation's history will critically damage our nation's population.

Emerging superpowers, in addition to our future lack of children, will have a drastic effect on our universities. South America is booming. And so is Iran. Chinese and Indians do not seem to need any magazine articles describing how to get pregnant. Higher demand for oil by India and China will result in higher fuel prices. Higher food prices will also arise, as petrochemicals are a significant component of food costs at the supermarket.

Therefore, colleges will no longer be able to maintain the vast heated athletic facilities, manicured lawns and abundant meal plans that are currently available. States such as New York, California, and Florida will be forced to rationalize vast state college campuses and sports programs by the end of this decade. Many private universities and colleges will also have to phase out dormitory living as well as they will not be able to afford the heating or air conditioning bills.

As the rupee and yen strengthen, our colleges will not be able to attract all these rich Asian students any more as many will be induced by their own universities to stay home and attend college. And where will the endless stream of PhD. candidates to our universities come from, if India and China expand their own research facilities.

Our universities and colleges will now have to convince more and more kids to pursue a poorly paid career in academic science. One of the reasons that colleges love Indian and Chinese graduate students is that they come from a sycophantic culture full of idol worship. The endless fawning of their geriatric superiors by Asian students appeals to the egos of our aging academia. Thus, it will be impossible for many of our colleges to recruit non-Asian students for a dead end career in science.

The reality is that few colleges with entrenched middle management, sclerotic professors, and restricted endowments will be able to attract high school students who want to pursue science majors. The discounting necessary for attracting PhD. candidates will devastate the net operating cash flow necessary for dormitory bond debt service. Thus, many colleges will not have the cash flow to make debt service on their dormitory bonds and will be forced to close.

Will there be a reverse brain drain? Our nation's immigration statistics speak for themselves. Many Indians and Chinese are leaving the Golden Mountain because they have found that it is made of lead. When middle class parents of college students apply IVY Verbal Review's discounted cash flow techniques to their out of pocket costs for education and their child's future after-tax earnings, they quickly understand the vast Ponzi scheme that is American higher education. College placement statistics compare apples to oranges.

Many Chinese and Indians see plenty of opportunity in their home countries not only for education, but also for employment and marriage. Detractors of what I am saying are right in that some of the students from our client states<sup>76</sup> will keep coming; especially those who cannot get into free state universities. But these detractors do not realize that many of our allies are currently reproducing below replacement level. They just do not have that many boys to export, especially in light of the rapidly expanding Indian and Chinese armies.

This means that the Japanese and Koreans will be reluctant by 2015 to send the few males they have to foreign colleges as they desperately need them at home to lift their elderly aristocracy into their posh Rolls Royces® or to assist them into their luxurious gold plated bath tubs.

We will not be able to attract the rich Japanese and Korean students who could not get into Tokyo University or Seoul University at all, as they will likely attend universities in India or China to get valuable business contacts for their wealthy extended families back home. As universities in China and India expand, it is likely that the native Chinese and Indians will stay home in order to take advantage of employment and marriage opportunities available at home.

Why would they want to attend universities where their cultural values are not appreciated? Thus, the student visa gravy train for most colleges will diminish quickly. Since few families in America make over $50,000 per annum, many colleges face the proverbial candle burning at both ends. The end result is that colleges will have to raise tuitions dramatically to cover their operating costs and their exorbitant salaries to their nabob administrators. This trend is enduring at American colleges and will escalate after 2013 when the candle burns out at many American colleges.

Engineering, computer programming, pharmaceutical research, and genomics are some of the careers that will completely disappear from the United States after 2010 as they are all technology based. Technology is a euphemism for computers and artificial intelligence. The reengineering<sup>77</sup> of American industry that has occurred in America under the watchful eyes of our LBO Medicis has resulted in the wholesale transfer of technological know-how to the Far East. The future national security risks for our nation are staggering.

Except for high-end military labs, Trademark Universal's Consulting Division believes that engineering, as a specialty will disappear in the United States by 2031. It is highly likely that the US will be competing with the European Union for the few large-scale development projects available. Therefore, fewer higher end jobs will be available to the thousands of students who spent hundreds of thousands of dollars for law degrees. So who will keep paying the higher tuition?

Universities with large unrestricted endowments will be safe in the near term. But these funds will be eaten up as private and state colleges compete with tuition incentives for the few students who can actually afford college. Thus, many endowments are seeking riskier investments to obtain higher returns where possible. However, the bulk of unrestricted endowments will be eaten up by entrenched management who will be able to approve ever higher salary packages for professors and administrators to maintain their hold on the organization. The end result of this vicious cycle of greed, in my opinion, is that most colleges in the United States will close by 2031.

Medical schools and law schools will be hard hit. Where will doctors work to make a living? Clearly, not in the lavish extended stay hotels we call hospitals today. Sustained $100 per barrel of oil will result in most hospitals shutting down. How can America compete if our companies keep suing each other? Ultimately, many law schools will close down.

Many professors will be soon out of work as the knowledge they profess is useless. Liberal arts schools will close at such a quick clip, that many parents will be scared that some may actually close prior to their child graduating. Worst of all, most college graduates will not find work.

Global Depression

The collapse of higher education in America coupled with the fall of House of Al Saud in Saudi Arabia will be the biggest blow to the American way of life that can be imagined. Saudi Arabia has helped us finance countless concentration camps and prisons in the United States and has enabled us to obfuscate the wholesale destabilization of African American families for over three decades<sup>78</sup>. There is a direct relationship between aristocratic families of our apartheid theocracy and the House of Al Saud<sup>79</sup>. The President's family is one of hundreds of families that have directly benefited from the trillion dollar trade we have had with the Al Saud family. Few Americans are unaware that Muslims the world over share a common admiration of India's caste system as the most fair system for maintaining aristocratic wealth, second only to Mussolini's scientific and clerical fascism.

In the Indian caste system, only members of the aristocracy could be educated. Faced with deflation after the Mughal invasions, India's aristocracy implemented a vast social system that enabled only a select few to become its priests, teachers, lawyers, and judges. By making sure economic boons were not shared with millions of lower castes who would not maintain the Brahmin hierarchy, India was able to create massive wealth for its aristocracy in a period when it did not have extensive internal contact with other civilizations. Prior to the rise of democracy in India, it was estimated that the Maharajah of Jaipur was worth well over $2 trillion dollars. His land holdings made the King Ranch look like a dilapidated outhouse in Siberia. He personally owned hundreds of thousands of untouchables<sup>80</sup>, all of which viewed him as God<sup>81</sup>.

<sup>79</sup> Others have commentated on this; I will not. The relationships are based on national security first.

<sup>81</sup> The Tsar of Russia was richer than the Maharajah. However, his untouchables were called serfs. In the United States, many Hindus typically refer to African Americans as untouchables. Literacy was the harbinger of the Russian Revolution, the same way it

By limiting access to literacy and mathematic skills at an early age, India's rajahs were able to make sure its highest castes would develop the psycho-social security under all circumstances to lead<sup>82</sup>. For centuries, the teaching was strictly one to one. This is why conquerors, including the British, were overcome by the vast wealth created by their caste system. Why would the primitive English want to destroy a system that indefinitely guaranteed their power and status regardless of ability<sup>83</sup>?

Rigorous oral examinations were prepared to facilitate understanding. Only after the leadership caste was able to pass lengthy oral examinations, were they able to take written examinations. Illiteracy and innumeracy prevented most from ever understanding that caste was an economic platform equivalent to slavery in the West.

Today in our own nation, our kids are taught ever new methodologies that obfuscate logic and understanding. Their parents are willing to listen to any psychological diagnoses that make it seem their children have intellectual assets. Today parents drug their kids to make them smarter or the parents themselves digest unbelievable levels of barbiturates to mentally maintain the social barriers of a caste system. Incapable of understanding what is happening in their own world, they cannot understand that our illusory prosperity and tranquility are based on high rates of homosexuality, was for the end of caste in India. Literate Karl Marx could not understand what role literacy would have in the destruction of caste. The written word, not religion, is the opiate of the masses.

<sup>82</sup> This is why to this day, Brahmin Hindus are overwhelmingly hired and promoted by American multinationals. New England industry during the 17th and 18th centuries largely adapted the Hindu caste system. Harvard is to this day viewed as an institution of Boston Brahmins.

<sup>83</sup> All religions had difficulty confronting India's caste system. Untouchability enabled the Mughal aristocracy to receive services without paying for the untouchables' labor. The French and the English prior to the collapse of their civilizations had similar practices. This is how the architecture of so many empires was built. Forcing these people to eat food not even fit for swine kept the operating costs low.

illegitimacy, drug addiction, and imprisonment (or AIDS; short for abortion, incarceration, divorce and sodomy); the same social forces that imperial England and France faced before their collapse. Few sociologists will ever publish that corruption and immorality are integral to the functioning of any caste based society.

By obfuscating the barriers of our caste system through financial rhetoric and endless research produced by patently racist think tanks, Americans are completely oblivious to the fact that in the last three decades, Republicans have implemented a caste system. Unfortunately, it takes two generations (or sixty years) to make a caste system permanent. Why sixty years? Facts turn into history within one generation. They soon become legend and myth with the passing of the second generation. Two generations must pass for people to forget what is fact. One only has to look at Japan to see the process of creating a caste system. We have a whole generation of Japanese who are completely unaware what they did to the rest of Asia. Few Japanese understand that as a US protectorate, they cannot teach the past. Few Western drug companies will ever tell you the sheer level of barbiturates sold under license to Japanese pharmaceutical companies. Japanese pharmaceutical companies, outside the United States, are the largest distributors of Paxil, Lexipro, and Prozac. The few Koreans, Chinese, Philipinos and Indians serve the same role in Japan that African Americans and Mexican Americans serve in our nation. They are treated like savages. They are prohibited from studying in the nation's elite universities.

Japan has largely implemented an apartheid theocracy over the last two decades. It is no surprise that the Japanese have a thriving banking and real estate sector. These are exactly the industries that would benefit in such a society. It is also no surprise that Japan has no social or industrial infrastructure outside its largest cities. There is no large university system outside of the large cities. The public education system reflects even our schools in performance once you leave Tokyo, Kyoto, and Yokohama. This performance matches the performance of apartheid societies<sup>84</sup>.

Japan has been forced to accept caste the way England, Germany, France, and the Middle East have. By creating the grand illusion of caste, the Western apartheid democracies have been able to camouflage rising deflation caused by the rise of India and China.

No society has ever shifted power from one race or ethnicity to another without wholesale violence. All societies decay until an external civilization decides to take advantage of the decay and declare war. Human civilization has never shifted except when war has been declared. It was only when our nation's white ethnics (Italians, Poles, Jews, Slavs, Arabs and Irish) started to organize into violent gangs that our national security apparatus started to accept them as low level functionaries in their apparatus. Today, no one questions the integrity of an Irish American FBI agent or an Italian American judge. No one!

Slowly, but surely they have been able to get higher and higher once they embraced the sweet smell of WASP supremacy. However, they have not been able to garner too much power from the Scottish and Anglo Saxon elite who now dominate the national security apparatus. Anyone who wants power in the United States must be able to deal with the reality that they have to obfuscate the reality that our society is firmly based on apartheid and caste.

Our social structure is based on the ever present need to incarcerate minority males to remove them from labor market eligibility. The endless incarceration has led to an endless demand for police officers, corrections officers, school safety officers, and federal peace officers. So static has the cycle of education to incarceration become, that institutions have corporatized its functions. Today we have for profit schools, for profit prisons, for profit hospitals, and for profit drug rehabilitation. Unfortunately, for the customers of these enterprises, they are completely unaware that these enterprises have to perpetuate ignorance, poverty and violence to expand their clientele.

<sup>84</sup> Unfortunately, the lies that the Japanese have printed over the last five decades are being confronted by the memories of societies that they once destroyed. How can a society that is willing to sell to everyone but unwilling to be accept cultural differences survive? I do not know.

By removing millions of aggressive men from our society via our massive gulags and concentration camps, Republicans have actively encouraged polygamy and lesbianism. More importantly, they have financed their denigging<sup>85</sup> policies under the guise of free markets. They have published endless treatises supporting the legitimacy of affirmative incarceration and the resulting free trade in the organs and tissues of fetuses. By hiding this affirmative incarceration policy under the rhetoric of affirmative action, few Americans can understand that America is rapidly removing African American citizens from the work force and replacing them with computers.

By issuing unwilling participants in this charade paper certificates called stocks and telling them they can sell it in the open market, and then telling them you need to hold them forever, our aristocracy has quietly sold off its own stocks. They have slowly and deliberately diversified their portfolios into assets in other countries. More importantly, they have adopted children from these countries and indoctrinated them in their beliefs. The endless supply of financial assets seems to be lost on countless individuals who do not realize yet that they will only be holding paper during a financial collapse.

Most Americans have so much of their wealth wrapped up in their homes. But in the last decade, they have borrowed against that wealth. They have used this wealth to invest in stocks and mutual funds as these assets are guaranteed to go up--at least that is what their broker told them. In addition, many non-profit organizations, (you may refer to them as universities, school districts, hospitals, etc...) have revised their charters to invest in hedge funds, junk bonds, emerging market stocks and speculative real estate investments.

More importantly, more and more parents are encouraging their children to borrow money to go to college. Education, which used to last 12 years in total, is now perpetual. Moreover, the additional years are not free. This has resulted in a massive wealth transfer from the youth who do not own homes, to the banking sector and their owners, our aristocracy. Thus, our hope for the future, our young people, is now enslaved financially. They will not be able to take the risks necessary to correct the economic hardships they will face. How will they be able to afford a home or have a wife? When will they be able to have children?<sup>86</sup>

Reproduction is the root cause of all depressions. Depressions occur when one nation has an abundance of babies and another society categorically refuses to have children. Thus, depressions are due to the lack of babies and the resulting lack of demand for real goods and non-financial services. This fact is obfuscated by large scale industry that clearly benefits from the lower corporate taxes due to fewer babies being born. Fewer babies mean less payroll corporate taxes. One university recently published a book encouraging families to have only one child. Why would they publish such a nonsensical book? Because fewer and fewer families can afford the cost of these tax-free mating nests.

Few people understand fully what deflation is. Deflation is what occurs when a society that has a surfeit of young families (especially one that is not burdened with homosexuality and lesbianism like we are) is forced to produce more mass market goods than a wealthier society. America has largely battled deflation from Germany, Japan, and France over the last three decades by incarcerating the poor (a policy I referred to in my last book as affirmative incarceration). It has also spent billions of dollars manufacturing the polyester charade that homosexuality and lesbianism is innate and not a social construct developed by aristocracies to perpetuate their power over a society. After all, if you do not have or want children, why would you want any form of social change? More importantly, our aristocracy has instituted a system of standardized exams that openly encourage homosexuality, lesbianism and drug addiction.

Boys cannot do well on new standardized exams unless they have the Boolean Grid. The Boolean Grid was developed to specifically reduce homosexuality, lesbianism, and drug addiction in teenagers. Its efficacy is startling. What the Boolean Grid promises is an end to the slaughter that we witness each day. What it means for our planet is an evolutionary leap in human aptitude. Deflation can only be battled with human capital.

Depressions always follow deflation. Endless theories are expounded because deflation, when fully explained, is the reason why the concept of interest is illegal and immoral in the Muslim and Christian faiths<sup>87</sup>. Why do economists spend endless time explaining deflation? Well they do not want you to know explicitly that they work for our aristocracy's banks.

Banks can only make a profit if you, the depositor, are paid interest less than the market rate of interest that the institution lends at. The difference is a spread that is the profit that they get to keep for holding your money in their vaults. Banks do not want you to know that few people borrow money in a deflationary environment. All deflationary environments are based on the lack of children. When a society stops reproducing, adults look to financial speculation. The media perpetuate the myth that financial speculation is the equivalent to social progress as the media are beholden to our banks. They tell you that one day if you save enough you will have enough money to have children. Then each day they tell you that inflation is there when it is not. Unbeknownst to you, the aristocracy that owns the banks also disseminates the propaganda that enables people to understand the world around them.

It is impossible for even the most religious person to ignore the bank-manufactured propaganda against children. Many Americans are unaware at how hard it is to have a healthy baby as one ages. To keep encouraging people to put off having children, banks routinely expound the high costs of having children. Consequently, the user of media confronts images of the ever increasing costs for daycare, food, and education. The data sets for the calculations are never provided. Even communist societies put out propaganda against having two children because they deem it better to have one. They never tell the person who has one child how hard it will be for that child especially if it is male to find a spouse. No woman on this planet willingly wants to take care of her parents as well as her husband's parents.

But this charade continues. It continues because our banks now control the global economy. The problem is that they cannot control global health, the amount of energy, or the weather of the planet. As these exogenous forces recombine like they did during the 1930's, we will see new diseases, new shortages in food, and new levels of human deprivation that will never be broadcast on our television sets.

Investment banks, institutions that collude together to make sure destructive technologies are never financed by the excess profits of personal savings, are as bug-eyed when it comes to explaining inflation. Fundamentally, inflation can only exist when you artificially reduce supply of any asset. For inflation to be maintained, no substitutes for that asset class can be manufactured.

Inflation always follows a period when there is rapid population growth and an inability to house that population. If the population growth is sustained (due to health advances or rapid imprisonment of males) then inflation will grow. The only way to mollify inflationary pressure is to build substitutes. But to build a substitute would hurt the wealth of the aristocracy and the earning potential of their children. More importantly, it would shift control of the national security apparatus to someone who may not be interested in preserving the rights of the current aristocracy.

So there is a need for the aristocracy of any society to prevent the development of substitutes. This is why law is developed in every society (including allegedly communist societies). But when a nation gets as rich as we have (similar to Manchurian China and the various city-states of Italy), you develop the record keeping ability to track human development. More importantly, you develop the clues to psycho-social security and how to prevent others who are not members of the aristocracy from obtaining it. Thus, a nation's flexible social structure becomes ossified.

Inheritance and nepotism overnight become key substitutes for talent. This trend occurred in Germany and Italy during and after World War I. Nepotism and tax-free inheritances are the social harbingers of fascism. The best law firms and investment banks in America are filled with lawyers and bankers who are related to the global aristocracy. This has happened even in firms where nepotism is absolutely prohibited. Accounting firms and management consulting firms have rampant nepotism. Even the supposedly last bastion of merit in America, professional and semi-professional sports, is rife with nepotism.

How do you get a job at Goldman Sachs or Morgan Stanley? Well, you have to be a relative of a client at that firm. Our aristocracy has helped hide nepotism with help from nepotistic Hollywood, nepotistic media firms, and nepotistic Washington D.C. Rampant nepotism has enabled America's aristocracy to successfully obfuscate and masquerade that inheritance and caste are the drivers of economic success. They used these same tactics prior to the Great Depression to make sure necessary social changes would not occur. Members of the aristocracy to this day are shocked that Franklin Roosevelt became President. They are absolutely clueless that people will vote with their stomachs first over the wallets of the aristocracy.

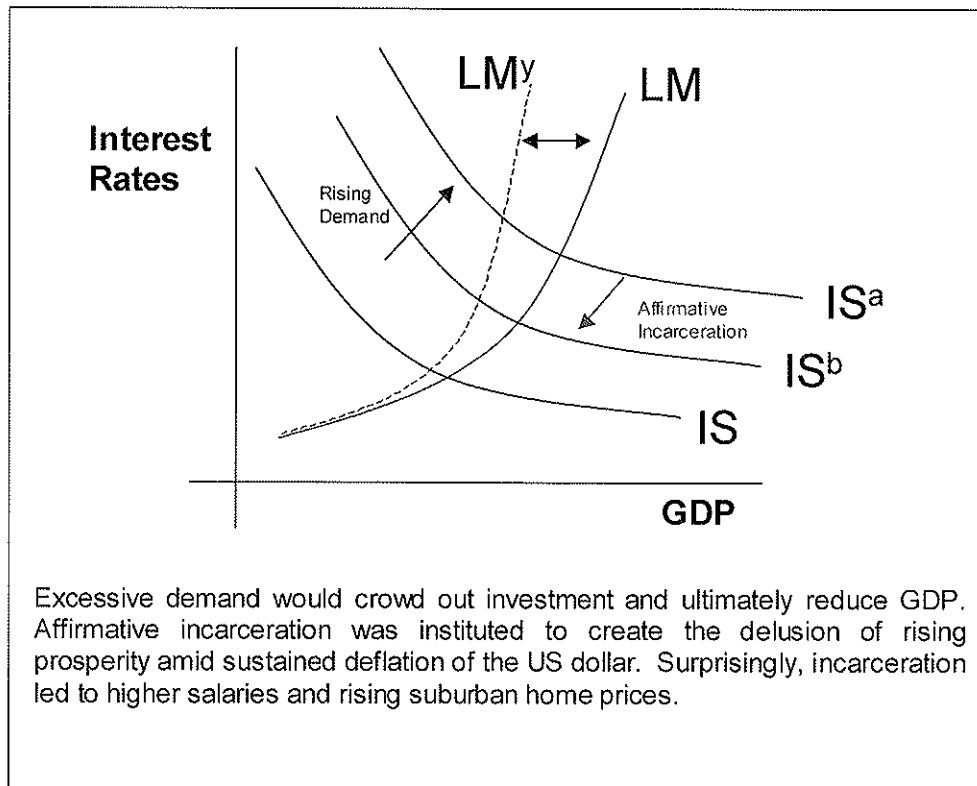

Many employers have formally accepted caste also as the only basis to accept new recruits. They will only hire people from families that are employed by their clients. So America shifted with the election of Richard Nixon to the tried and true techniques for ossification and consequently, economic collapse. Our Federal Reserve has actively encouraged speculation in stocks and real estate by those who should be steering clear from it. This aggressive monetaristic policy will reignite inflation when people have the least ability to defend themselves.

Inflation is a monetary phenomenon and can only exist where there is excessive savings to continually fund financial speculation. This is impossible in a world where Glass-Steagall existed. But excessive savings is limited by actual physical money. However, during rampant inflation politicians are loath to raise taxes. Rather they expand the money supply, fueling more inflation and speculation. The end result is a banking system driven by politicians. This is what monetarism is when it is uncontrolled by an independent Federal Reserve.

Monetarism is nothing more than a formal financial model to preserve the wealth of the aristocracy. The aristocracy, which owns vast wealth in the form of land, housing, distribution networks, professional franchises and large factories are highly subject to substitution risk. So monetarists argue that efficiency is enabled via competition, but they are keen to avoid encouraging competition in established industries via a banking system's lending policies.

Monetary economists rile against subsidies, but they are ok with the subsidies that enable the wealthy to gain lucrative jobs at federally funded universities. As long as Americans are unaware how the prison system hides deflation by creating jobs and economies of scale and scope for rural hamlets, monetarists will triumph. Monetarists have successfully obfuscated the rampant deflation associated with the reemergence of India and China by supporting tough on crime social policies.

These economists routinely argue that social policies are not the domain of economists. So why do they always justify the reduction in welfare? Are they not aware that if there are not enough jobs, then people will commit crimes to get food? Will not criminals then need more prisons? They cannot at all explain the role of our prison system in expanding illegal immigration. How can there be so little unemployment and no inflation? Probably because so many illegal aliens are not taxed. By excluding food and energy in critical economic calculations, monetarists have convinced everyone that illegal aliens do not burden the economy. The monetarists do not like welfare for minorities, as it does not create jobs for their benefactors, our aristocracy. By constantly depicting African American mothers as opposed to the millions of white females and Mexican women on welfare, monetarists can use negative caste images to destroy the rhetoric of expanding welfare policies to benefit poor families.

Even Vincent Fox, the outgoing President of our stooge Mexico, eerily remarked that Mexicans are doing the jobs that African Americans refuse to do. His rhetoric works in Mexico<sup>88</sup>, but it cannot work in our nation. African Americans cannot do the work because too many of them have been touched by our penal system. More importantly, by counting employed part timers as part of the employment market place, and excluding prisoners and unemployed Americans, our monetarists have created the perfect world; a simulacra. A virtual money machine. Similar to the money machine Enron created in California. One where low interest rates and low unemployment have no Phillips curve effect. There is neither high unemployment, nor is there any inflation<sup>89</sup>. How could that be unless they are hiding inflation? Where but in off-balance sheet "black" GDP accounts maintained by the intelligence apparatus or in Bermuda-based SIVs fronted by banks. Oh, those trillion dollar accounts!

Look how more efficient the telephone is when compared to the telegraph. Unfortunately, no one thought so in the early part of the 20th century. Alexander Graham Bell was ridiculed for inventing such a useless device. What we have discovered from the inventions made from Edison and Bell (and countless others) in the 20th century is the discovery process<sup>90</sup>. During the 20th century, our aristocracy has worked hand in hand to make sure that the discovery process is curtailed dramatically among young scientists.

What I am about to tell you will shock you! America is actively encouraging students to not pursue science as a vocation. You, the reader, are incredulous because the newspapers keep saying that we need scientists. Students are taking science courses as well as advanced science courses. But those who want to pursue scientific research opportunities are being turned away due to the caste system that has been implemented by our aristocracy over the last thirty years. More importantly, colleges are actively looking for upper caste docile girls to run statistical routines. In our Ceacescuan meritocracy, basic math is relabeled advanced science research based on caste.

By incessantly manufacturing polyester scientific credentials that totalitarian regimes<sup>91</sup> prior to us have utilized, we have created a class of scientists that cannot challenge the existing orthodoxy in any philosophical realm. Our scientific community, faced with the reality that India and China are expanding their scientific base rapidly, has effectively emplaced a caste system in our nations laboratories.

Scientists point out that there are Chinese, Indians and Arabs in our laboratories. Almost all of them are not Christians and are thus not part of the Christian caste system. But they are all

<sup>91</sup> See Romania under Ceausescu where PhDs were routinely guaranteed to dubious scientists. Competent scientists would publish monographs that were then re-signed by idiots that were related to Ceausescu. Look at the recent collapse of stem cell research in South Korea, a regime that clearly operates under totalitarian principles in the realm of science.

from overseas and many have restricted visas. Thus, many are really slaves. They came here as graduate students. More importantly, American corporations are slowly shifting most of their research to India and China where our caste biases can easily be perpetuated. Few Chinese or Indians in these countries are Christians.

Fundamental research will stay here but the labs will be a lot smaller. Many scientists prefer the sycophantic nature of Indian and Chinese graduate students from Asia. It is hard for many Americans to take a position that pays only $22,000 per annum, but many Asians do, as they continually look to the currency they are receiving in exotic terms<sup>92</sup>. These docile students worship their mentors as they come from cultures that exaggerate the importance of education and obfuscate the economic collapse that their nations had to endure due to restrictive free trade policies during the 19th century. Few success tomes in American emphasize that many degrees were given away to members of the aristocracy during World War II. More importantly, many of these Asian students do not have the ability to enter the private sector. Lacking the language skills or the widespread social networks available to someone who grew up here, they are in the dark as to how to capitalize on their skill set. Most do it wrongly as most of their mentors have no desire to see them get ahead.

By not pursuing science, American children will not be able to withstand the socialization that precedes the reestablishment of apartheid. Apartheid is the hallmark of a caste society<sup>93</sup>. I'll give you an example of a poor white male student I mentored named Alex. He was a student from my IVY Verbal Review

<sup>92</sup> $22,000 converts to 880,000 Rupees assuming 40 rupees per dollar. This is an astronomical sum for a graduate student in India. That is why so many Indians willingly take these positions. Most importantly, if they complain about abusive labor practices, the university can have them deported at any moment. One in one thousand graduate students will make a large income, but 999 will have wasted a good portion of their working life earning nothing. Meanwhile, the university keeps all of their knowledge (called trade secrets) and patents.

classes and he was literally brilliant. Unfortunately, he didn't have the wealth to be successful. Alex took the SAT® and totally bombed the math section. He took it again and got a lower score. Prior to taking the SAT®, he took the SAT II® math exam and got an 800 on it. So how could he possibly have gotten a lower score on an exam that was easier? In his frustration he called the testing service that administers the exam and they advised him that they could not provide him an answer sheet as they had misplaced his exam.

This is not a unique situation. It happens hundreds of times in every state in our Union. What is unique about it is that it almost always happens to students who are poor. Standardized testing services do not test for aptitude. Rather their purpose is to exclude as many poor white students as possible from contention to prestigious universities. What is unique about this process in the United States is that there is a double standard when it comes to females. Poor white girls are encouraged to apply to higher education, but poor white boys are not.

Many wealthy students, who apply for college in the United States, if they have financial means, do not have to take the requisite exams that poor whites have to take. Top universities routinely waive standardized test requirements for rich applicants (I have proof of this). The same applies to wealthy Europeans. Wealthy foreigners are excluded from taking the ACT® and the SAT®.

Alex's situation with the SAT® made me question what is standardized testing in the United States. I did not think I would uncover anything irregular as I prep many kids from many diverse backgrounds. But unlike most reporters and teachers, I am the founder of a multi-billion dollar corporation. In addition, I have built massive power plants all over our planet. So I came to the realm of standardized testing with a different eye.

I empathized with Alex a lot. Unlike many of the students I have mentored, most of my scientific endeavors did not end in any awards or remuneration. I did not realize in my youth that there was a caste system in America that systematically discriminated against minority male Christians. As a child in 1982, I did a great science project on acid rain and its damaging effects on common grass. I even ran experiments where I increased the acidity of water. I monitored the results and wrote phenomenal tables. But I lost out to two girls who were not part of our caste system due to their faith. These young women also lived in the wealthier parts of town. They did projects on making paper and another on the rate of spoilage in tomato soup.

The only people who can succeed in America are those who will openly support our military industrial complex and its ravaging of our planet. Anyone who succeeds in American science fairs may not question any aspect of American industry. I did not know, due to my own naiveté about the role of the petrochemical aristocracy in science, that my project's evidence would never enable me to win a science contest.

How this continued scientific ignorance will benefit us in the future is unknown? How this will benefit the aristocracy is absolutely certain. This manufactured credential charade will enable the children of the aristocracy to take on the vacant mantles of leadership in all aspects of the national security apparatus. This is how you create a caste of Brahmins.

Now when I train other students, I keep Alex in mind. I am firmly of the view that the SAT® is a manipulated test. I am also of the view that most credentials in America are rampantly manipulated to favor the aristocracy. Thus, students from all over the United States use our IVY Verbal Review program to learn about the ways of the aristocracy. It has enabled customers from our program to attend Harvard, Princeton, Brown, Yale, Cornell, University of Pennsylvania, Dartmouth, Columbia, Stanford, California Institute of Technology, Johns Hopkins University, New York University and countless others.

The experience I had with Alex enabled me to counsel others better. Another student I had named Abhinav took the SAT®. Unlike Alex's family, his parents were highly paid doctors. Abhinav was not as smart as Alex but he went to a school district that had very high property values. He had no idea how to be successful. So Abhinav took our IVY Verbal Review course prior to taking the SAT®. He did very well. He took it again, and he did better.

I prepared all of Abhinav's applications. I prepared him for interviews. I showed him how to dress and how to act in public. Abhinav went to a science contest and became a finalist in the competition. Abhinav's success is not at all amazing in the annals of America's science fairs. Nor is Alex's failure uncommon. Abhinav's victory was assured as he had utilized our Viral Acculturation Methodology as well as our MC123 writing techniques to convince the science contest's judges that he was not a threat to the national security apparatus. Not a single science contest in America is based on merit. It is strictly judged by caste acceptability to the gatekeepers of our apartheid theocracy<sup>94</sup>.

Today, most science contests overtly favor girls. Science is a field that is based on the constant retesting of methodologies and theories. Consequently, it is filled with endless failure. Women, biologically and psychologically, are not always successful in careers where there is constant failure. This means in double speak that many females over time will withdraw from careers in science. Unfortunately, the goal of science fairs in our nation is to fail men. By breaking the link between psychosocial security and intellectual curiosity, our aristocracy has succeeded in making sure that it will continue to dominate scientific thought. We are willingly as a nation revisiting the social planning that the Mughals utilized to institute caste in India.

By publishing endless treatises in newspapers that the brightest kids only go to Harvard University or MIT, our aristocracy has convinced millions to believe in the ultimate blasphemy; that only man-made institutions have a grasp on what is true in our universe. More importantly, they have stymied scientific debate such that all science must support the positions of our apartheid theocracy, otherwise it is viewed as heresy.

In The Rise of Hindu Supremacy, I stated a postulate that all laws and codicils of the national security apparatus (which includes or banks, our industry, our landlords, and our government) unequivocally must benefit the aristocracy<sup>95</sup>, otherwise it will never be law. This postulate can also be applied to scientific research in our nation as well.

We can see this with the expansion of credit in 2001–2004. By stoking inflation, the Federal Reserve co-opted the ability of the federal government to enhance existing social programs and its ability to create new social programs. We can also see this with our prison system, currently having touched nearly ten percent of our total population, and seventy percent of our African American population. We can also see this with rampant illegal immigration to our nation, enabling our aristocracy to conceal wage price inflation for unskilled labor. By putting millions of African Americans in jail, we have abrogated the Voting Rights Act and reformulated apartheid for the information age.

The New York Times® now publishes articles criticizing the prison system, the educational system, the banking system, and our industry. Could this mean the end of our aristocracy? This would mean that the preceding postulate that I stipulated is no longer valid. Not at all! Rather the postulate has been proven again. Now it is validly predicting the demise of The New York Times®.

After making sure for thirty years, that only wealthy kids would have access to America's colleges via its Kaplan® subsidiary, our aristocracy is rest assured that their children will gain unbridled access to their professional franchises granted to them as boons after World War II. After having published bold face lies to encourage the war in Iraq, endless investments into corrupt shell companies fronted by our "lords of the manor born", the expansion of eminent domain on small business men, the expansion of drug control policy to encourage rampant imprisonment, the infringement of personal liberty, and the Orwellian double speak of the Contract For America, our apartheid theocracy no longer needs the bully pulpit of The New York Times®. Thus, it is irrelevant to the rise of the Fourth Reich.

Today our aristocracy dominates the scientific realm, the industrial realm, and the government realm (including our military intelligence agencies). How will their wealth be sustained when 80 million people die due to old age? How will they be able to monetize their wealth and reestablish themselves again in Asia as gods or mandarins or nabobs? Who will help them? Who will orchestrate their stock trades? Who will be their agents? There is no law in our nation that sanctions state sponsored murder.

The Constitution has been sodomized to welcome the Son King. Corn is now being fed to our machines. Our judiciary has been made impotent. Our newspapers, television, and radio are now owned by the apartheid theocracy. Posters are being placed all over New York City with cartoon images of rats, warning people to watch out for them. Who will feed those disgusting rats? All is being set for the king of kings, the Lord of Hosts to take his rightful place. All is ready for the Rise of The Fourth Reich.

The Rise of the Fourth Reich

The Fourth Reich is exactly that, a return of the vile social policies of the 20th century's Nazi Party to combat the need for expanding socialism in the United States. Socialism is necessary to combat the rising influence of Asian hegemony on the apartheid theocracies of the West. It has already started. The collapse of free trade, capitalism and white supremacy (see the first book of this series, The Rise of Hindu Supremacy) will lead to the realignment of global priorities to one that will look to undermine the national security of India. As I stated earlier, India is a clear and present danger to the national security of the United States.

Faced with a loss of prestige and racial hegemony, the remaining polyglot of Caucasian nations and their client states will again accept the fascist agenda and reconstitute the Fourth Reich. The Fourth Reich will initially contain most of Russia, France and the United States. China will also join as an additional bulwark to containing Hindu expansion<sup>96</sup>. Much like the Rising Sun in the 1920's, Hindu supremacy will clearly be evident by the rise of the Indian service sector to worldwide dominance.

India's advance will be largely due to China's rapidly aging population. In the next seven years, leaps and bounds will be made in the fields of computing and artificial intelligence. But it will not be made in the United States. Few people are aware that Indians who were not even physicists filled significant gaps in Einstein's Theory of Relativity. Such is the depth of human capital in India. And this human capital will increase in value as the optical internet rolls out.

WASP nations, as well as their stooges (such as China and Japan) are highly reliant on rote learning as well as paper based knowledge transfer. The optical internet will facilitate learning in what is considered a largely illiterate nation. Unlike the western alphabet, Indian languages (at least the top 21 language groups) are entirely phonetic. Illiteracy in India as well as in most of Asia is due to the lack of teachers, and not due to any ethnic or hereditary aspect. The optical internet and satellite based technology makes the need for school buildings unnecessary. Thus, it is far easier to facilitate literacy in India than in any other part of the world.

The Chinese will prefer war as opposed to passing power onto a new generation of leadership that may accommodate the Hindus. All four nations will align to contain Hindu supremacy (see the chart below). A major factor will be India's desire to dominate and control the Middle East. Many people forget that Indians are the de facto administration in many Middle Eastern states. Few people understand that the largest Muslim nation

2020 : India Reemerges As The Nemesis

(the result of 4th generation telecom)

in the world is India and that India can make ready alliances with the Middle East. The Hindu nation has the one resource that most Muslim nations do not have; highly qualified human capital. And the Middle East has the one asset that India needs more than China and that is petroleum.

The chart above will be exactly how the world order will look like in 2020. Why? The radically new society that was forecasted by futurists since the 1970's will be here, but it will not exist in the United States. America's continued love of affirmative incarceration will force it to assist in the near annihilation of the Indian subcontinent. This can only explain the near lack of worry on the part of the State Department and the Commerce Department with respect to predictions of American blight. They are not worried about it as they are overtly assisting others to suppress and destabilize the Indian economy.

By forcing so many Indians to seek work in high technology, many Americans do not realize that the Indian Samuel Slater's they have trained in the last twenty years will develop the new technologies in this sector. But unlike Samuel Slater, they will have returned to India and will have access to the quantum brains and culture of Earth's first race. All of it facilitated by the optical internet. If the western powers do not circumvent India, the end result will be clearly lose lose for the West.

But there is a new rub. Unbeknownst to everybody there is a new generation of technology on the books that has not been rolled out yet. Forget cellular and third generation networks, think of fourth generation. What is fourth generation?

Fourth generation is communications with no terrestrial network; no copper and no aluminum. Meaning the entire communications is between satellite, substations and human. There will be no paper trail. Just a voiceprint acknowledging the order. Thus there will be tremendous leap forward to those societies that have no institutional infrastructure focused on the use of paper invoices and physical currency.

Every aspect of our nation's and Europe's 2G and rapid 3G rollouts will become obsolete in a matter of years as opposed to decades. Thus, there will be tremendous leap forward to those societies that reject both forms of WASP imperialism; capitalism and communism<sup>97</sup>. These ideologies cannot survive when there is no institutional need for incarceration.

Indians do not have the financial myths of social security and pensions that have been manufactured by apartheid theocracies in the West to exploit our innate fear of death<sup>98</sup>. Furthermore, the erosion of these two critical wealth transfer schemes will lead to the shift in fundamental research from the West to India. Few Americans understand that the telephone, the jet and the computer were invented prior to our nation building the largest concentration camp system in the world. The fuel bill for this system coupled with war with Iran, just like the fuel bill for Hitler's system, will cause the collapse of our nation.

Indian's already live with immense insecurity. They have no pensions, no welfare state, no hospitals and no schools and yet they produce the most brilliant minds on the planet. Imagine what they will do when they have enough food to eat and put in place social institutions that will promote psycho-social security and critical thinking.

Capitalistic-based regimes cannot allow rapid phase-outs of existing technologies, even if they are obsolete, as it would require too much of a financial burden on executive

<sup>97</sup> Few Americans realize that Russians are WASPs. The Russian Orthodox Church as well as the Anglican Church are sister churches under the Roman Catholic See.

<sup>98</sup> As France can attest to any Western nation, it just does not have the money for its pensions in any account. They are just book entries. There is no cash in French accounts. There is no third party accountant who reviews the books of French pensions. French pensions are paid via the exorbitant taxation of immigrant labor.

compensation plans<sup>99</sup>. Corporations will have to be bailed out by the government or permitted to fold with limited disruption of the gravy train to our millionaire Congressman, Swiss-bank account holding Senators and land-option-holding judges. I doubt our nation and the European Union will permit AT&T, Sprint, and Vodaphone to file for bankruptcy every three years so that they can be competitive with India.

Thus, the hyper-competition brought about by 4G technologies will eliminate all vestiges of WASP imperialism. The West, after massive genocide that will make Hitler look like a faggot, will return to its ancient role of serving as ports for exporting agricultural produce to Asia.

There is no way that we will allow our advanced civilization to return to an agrarian economy. We will prevent this from happening by any means necessary. Thus, our key ally in the Fourth Reich will be Pakistan. Arming Pakistan to instigate nuclear oblivion will continue to be the linchpin of US security measures over the next decade.

Most Americans in the know understand that the ultimate end—a nuclear confrontation—is the only way of destabilizing India. Indian industry cannot expand nor Indian society be considered safe if Pakistan keeps expanding its nuclear arsenal. The end goal is not jihad, as many radical Muslims in Pakistan are led to believe, but a slow and steady process of destabilizing India and preventing it from being a viable competitor on the world stage<sup>100</sup>.

I predicted in The Rise of Hindu Supremacy that the world's first nuclear war will be between Pakistan and India. This is something I advised students of IVY Verbal Review. The end result of this exchange will be the complete annihilation of Pakistan and the complete destruction of the northern half of

---

<sup>99</sup> 4G will mean the elimination of all 3G R&D expenses and capex. The resulting write-offs will make most communication companies go bankrupt.

<sup>100</sup> This will be discussed in detail in Book III of this series, World War III.

India. If the exchange occurs between India and Pakistan prior to the start of the monsoons, then all of India will suffer from extended strontium exposure and massive catastrophic flooding. Not only will trade be eliminated, but also nearly all Indian babies born in the year of confrontation will die from radiation poisoning. If they live, they will die from the frigid temperatures of a nuclear winter.

It will be in the national interest of the nations that comprise the Fourth Reich. Those who have power will never ever cede it willingly. Just look at the front pages of our newspapers and you will see scandals after scandals. Politicians, bosses and even parents do not like to cede the role of master to the slaves of the world. Thus, any new emerging industrial power will likely face nuclear annihilation. It is what we did to Japan. It is what we will do to India.

Incapable of getting people to borrow more money, our apartheid theocracy (through their banks, charities, corporations, and industry groups) and their elected stooges will orchestrate pogroms beyond human imagination. This is what happened in Baghdad. We knew the Iraqis would riot<sup>101</sup>. What would you do if you had no money, no food, and no drinking water, and the human infrastructure of your society disappeared in a day? Recall that human beings in modern societies eat three meals per day; they do not know how to forage for food. And massive riots had happened in prior military occupations when food and water were cut off. The question that was unanswered was how would Americans react after seeing it live on television.

This is also what happened in New Orleans. Only people outside of Louisiana think that New Orleans is a prosperous city. The majority of that states parishes are insolvent or bordering on insolvency. The state is too poor for most people to comprehend. To give you an idea, absent federal transfer payment's most of Louisiana's parishes are poorer than most cities in Mexico. Frontline™ (the PBS documentary show) broadcasted a show years ago describing how the Army Corps of Engineers knew that the levees in New Orleans would be severely weakened in a Category 3 hurricane. And that is exactly what happened when Hurricane Katrina came in. The federal government new way beforehand that an entire section of the city would flood. Thus, FEMA knew categorically that thousands would die. The question that was unanswered was how would Americans react after seeing it.

Somehow the illiterate and backward North Koreans are able to build a nuclear device, but a wealthy Asian country that has food, oil, functional universities and brilliant well-nourished mathematicians cannot. Unbeknownst to the idiots we have in our intelligence agencies Iran has atomic weaponry. They are looking for signatures, documents and exact testimony. Unaware that theocracies have no memo takers, they focus on the rhetoric of President Ahmenijad. They are disregarding the rising childhood cancer deaths from leukemia in key port cities along the Straits of Hormuz. The vanity that led England into a disastrous war with Germany now goads us also into a 100 years war with Iran.

We are over focused on our superior technology and intellect. Our Republican politicians are quick to advise us that Jesus is a Puerto Rican working in Spanish Harlem. Yes, Moses also cleans the halls of a dormitory. Our vast concentration camp system proves that the Christian concept of redemption is no longer valid. Slowly the Christian concept of resurrection is mitigated by the reemergence of reincarnation.

New Orleans has proved that Christ's love never existed. After all, God is a terrestrial manifestation according to our bank sponsored psychologists. Slowly, our kleptocratic jurisprudence and moral hypocrisy vanishes into the cold, circular logical void that is totalitarian fascism. Unable to stall India's growth through the ever-increasing highway speed limits of our modern Hawt Smooly Tariff, we obfuscate the rise of Hindu Supremacy<sup>102</sup>. Why unravel the Gordian knot when we can easily blame all of our internal demographic problems on the brown heathen?

Now you the reader is aware of the darkness that returns to this planet. The Fourth Reich rises like a phoenix from the monkish fears of caste. Our apartheid aristocracy has transformed itself into an apartheid theocracy. God is with us! Our priests, our industry, our landlords, our banks, our charities, our government and our citizenry are slowly accepting the fundamental tenets of totalitarianism to ward off the deflationary aspects of a reemerging Asia. We will never accept socialism. Hope, not food, will fill empty bellies!

Moreover, our Arab and Chinese partners even have successfully assisted us in drawing maps where Israel and Taiwan looks like they are each the size of Asia Minor. They have assisted us in depicting Muslims, not as the loving people they are, but as murderous thugs. All in the hope that India will collapse from within. Now we too will follow the darkness that enveloped Germany, England, France, Byzantium, Rome, Greece and countless other empires before it.

But the empires that set before us, did not master the atom. The Son King returns. Only the ghost of Ken Lay knows that we have developed aerosol weaponry that can manipulate the messages that our bodies transmit to our hearts to maintain homeostasis. To counter our advanced RNA weaponry, Iran will have only one ace to play.

That Joker, Pakistan's ISI, will be played only once. So confident are the CIA, NSA, and FBI that the ISI is our stooge. After all, they got the weapons to Osama Bin laden during the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan for us. They even helped us kill Pakistani leaders when we needed to. According to our Wahabi stooges, a Muslim cannot be Indian.

So what does Iran have that we cannot possibly see via three trillion dollars of satellites, human spying, psychological simulations and radio-controlled drones? Why, what else? The only thing that cannot ever be seen electronically. The vanity of our hegemony prevents us from comprehending that Iran's Qods forces and Russia's FSB have started to exert control over our stooge, Pakistan's ISI, and its nuclear weaponry. After all, Musharef is not stupid! What is wealth when one has power.

When necessary, Dr. Abdul Khan, Pakistan's national hero, and this century's Archduke Ferdinand will be assassinated, setting off a chain of events that will trigger World War III. He has been guaranteed entry, by God's representatives, into Paradise. And who will the Pakistani's blame when Dr. Khan is killed? Do you really think they will blame our CIA, FBI, or NSA? Absolutely not!

Everyday, for the past ten years, Wahabi clerics have fed Pakistan's starving poor and convinced them that the House of Shiva must be destroyed. When you are starving, homeless and an orphan, L-Tryptophan in animal proteins will make you believe that Paradise is not a manifestation of your id. Why else would Saudi Arabia be building massive cities the size of Boston all over the Sahara? Why else would Israel be building massive technical parks? Why else are Republicans unconcerned with the rise of the East? Because the House of Shem knows that the House of Shiva will be destabilized.

Thus, as you read this, the final chapter of homo sapiens is being written. So let it be done...

About Tom Mathew

Tom Mathew is the founder of three profitable multinational companies (Google "Tom Mathew U5S" for SEC documents). Trademark Universal, Inc is his current venture and it is scheduled for its IPO in 2009. Trademark's proprietary learning methodology, the Boolean Grid, has enabled mentally handicapped children to obtain high scores on the SAT® and to lead productive lives. His second company SE Finance Company was sold, prior to its IPO, to Southern Company for an undisclosed 10-figure amount. His first company, Compu-Craze Inc. with offices in New York and Chennai is currently in registration for listing on the Mumbai Exchange.

The author is a banker by training and has played an integral role in the growth of America's military-industrial complex (primarily General Electric®, US Steel®, ETS®, Southern Company®, BP/Amoco®, Koch®, Texaco®, Bechtel®, MCA Universal®, Exxon Mobil®, the US Navy, Kimberly Clarke®, AT&T®, and IBM®) worldwide. Mr. Mathew has also played a role in the planning and financing of hundreds of our nation's cities, school districts, hospitals, universities, transportation hubs, stadiums, and waste treatment facilities.

Mr. Mathew's innovations and companies have led to approximately $12 billion dollars in wealth creation for Americans (over $5 billion dollars in wealth for the Southern Company's shareholders and the DVR has created over $7 billion of wealth for Americans) and the birth of tens of millions of little babies around the world. The Boolean Grid will surpass both combined. He lives and consults in New York.
